Not Quite Harmonious
A Three Cornered War
Veterans and Farmers
Garibaldi's Wife

—By Arthur Brisbane

A BEAUTIFUL THING is harmony, but we haven't got it in our national government. President Hoover appeared before the Senate yesterday to persuade gentlemen on the floor to balance the nation's budget. In moderate, carefully guarded terms, he suggested a sales tax which would produce the necessary income.

Shortly thereafter the Senate finance committee defeated that tax by a vote of 12 to 8.

Germany, after maintaining a republic since the war, will probably try a dictator, Mr. Hitler, young Nazi leader, "the German Mussolini."

Paris, much interested in the possibilities, well may be. Dictators often agree. Mussolini gave a fine reception to the Turkish representative of Kemal Pasha.

Mussolini and Hitler might unite to concentrate attention on France.

Germany would like to recover billions and territory given to France. Mussolini wants to make the Mediterranean "an Italian lake" and establish Italy as leader among Latin races.

A three cornered war, Germany and Italy against France, would probably REMAIN strictly three cornered. England would not go in. Poland and other countries generously financed by France since 1918 might be elsewhere busy.

It is an unpleasant thought for France, but that gigantic pile of gold in Paris might melt rapidly under such conditions. No wonder the French keep up their fighting air fleet and submarines, always building and improving.

Five hundred and twenty-five Pacific coast veterans of the World War are at Washington sleeping on straw sacks, living on food supplied by two rolling kitchens from the War College, and complaining of "thin, watery cabbage soup and diluted milk." They want work, even at one dollar a day.

They will stay there until the bonus is paid, "if they have to stay until 1945."

Farmers would be interested in a photograph of the veterans, camping in Washington, near the Department of Agriculture, one blowing a bugle, announcing that food is ready. Congress, police and government treat them respectfully.

The veterans, "organized" and WELL ORGANIZED, say what they want, and somebody listens. Farmers, not organized, say what they want, and NOBODY listens.

Garibaldi, who established the Italian nation, had a wife, Anita, whom he called "The most perfect human creature known to mankind." She went everywhere with him, even onto the battlefield, and died in his arms, after one of his most disastrous defeats.

Italy has erected a fine monument to Garibaldi on Rome's Janiculum Hill, and beside his monument another is erected to his wife. Tomorrow her body, brought from Genoa, will be placed beneath her monument, close to that of her husband. In that, Italy sets a fine example.

When a man is honored, his wife should be honored as well. And no man should have a monument without the name of his mother upon it, and the statement that the monument is erected in honor of HER SON.

Americans will hear with regret of the serious illness of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, now in a Philadelphia hospital. The sudden death from heart disease of Mrs. Curtis, who had gone to the hospital to be with her husband, must necessarily aggravate Mr. Curtis' condition.

Only a week ago yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Curtis were entertaining friends on board their yacht in New York harbor, both in excellent health.

Emerson called life "A bubble and a scepticism, and a sleep within a sleep."

One hundred years ago, died Georges Leopold Chretien Frederic Dagobert Cuvier.

The French naturalist had a brain worthy of his big name. His brain, weighed after death, was almost heavy enough for two ordinary men. THE ROWS OF BOOKS THAT HE WROTE.

Few scientists celebrate Cuvier's centenary, the world knows and cares little about it. But what Cuvier did, carrying on the work that Aristotle began, centuries before him, will be taught when our present interests shall have been forgotten.

Pope Pius yesterday celebrated his 75th birthday in excellent health, with a special mass of thanksgiving in his private chapel. His sister, Donna Camilla Ratti, a niece and a nephew were among the few invited.

The Pope's health remains excellent despite his confinement in the Vatican, thanks to a youth spent out of doors with

STONE ASKED TO EXPLAIN $21,000

Judge Campbell Says if Colleague Can't Tell Then the Estate Is Mismanaged

An item of $21,000 in Judge Arthur P. Stone's account of his administration of the esate of Dr. Genevieve Clarke awaits explanation, Judge Colin C. Campbell stated in Middlesex probate court today.

Judge Campbell is presiding at the hearing on Judge Stone's accounting, allowance of which is being contested by Dr. Inez Clarke, beneficiary, whose attorney yesterday accused the East Cambridge district court justice of misappropriation.

Judge Stone continued on the witness stand under cross-examination of W. Barton Leach, Harvard law school professor, all morning, and several clashes between counsel enlivened the hearing.

Judge Campbell finally interrupted to remark that what he was particularly interested in is explanation of an item of $21,000 appearing in Judge Stone's accounting as having been paid by him to Dr. Inez Clarke. This has not been explained, in his opinion, he said.

UNABLE TO EXPLAIN

"If that can't be explained it would be evident that the estate had not been properly handled."

Judge Stone reiterated his inability to explain what was done with approximately $4400 he withdrew from various bank accounts of the estate.

He was again closely questioned regarding his purchase of five $1000 bonds in the Rice Chocolate Co., in which he is clerk, director and attorney, and insisted that this investment was made for Dr. Inez Clarke, after he had consulted her, under a power of attorney he held for her. He again disclaimed that the investment was for Dr. Genevieve Clark's estate.

He admitted that of the purchase price $500 came from Dr. Inez Clarke's accounts and $4500 from the accounts of the estate.

PROTESTED AT CHARGE

He said when he finally turned over the assets of the estate to Dr. Inez Clarke she protested at the size of his charge for services and he told her he had done a lot of work for her, even to the extent of selecting rugs.

His total charges, he said, were $11,130.16, of which only $2650 was against the estate and the remainder for services to Dr. Inez Clarke.

In arriving at the total charges for his services, he testified, he took the total amount received as assets and the total of what he accounted for to Inez and set the difference as his charge.

Leach, in his opening yesterday, said Judge Stone's charges were made solely to cover up misappropriation.

NO RECORD OF IT

Judge Stone adbitted he didn't tell Dr. Inez Clarke about withdrawing money from various bank accounts and putting it in his personal account.

He said he drew $800 from one account and gave it to Dr. Inez, got no receipt and made no record ofit and didn't include it in his accounting because he forgot it.

HUGE TAX BILL IS SENT TO CONFERENCE

Measure Being Rushed Along So That It Can Soon Become Law

Washington, June 1—Congress sped to conclusion on its greatest peacetime task today—that of balancing a gaping treasury deficit to preserve the American dollar from foreign attacks pictured by President Hoover.

The billion-dollar revenue bill, archstone of the bridge over the Treasury gap, was returned to the House again and immediately directed to a conference between the two branches to get final agreement on the legislation.

The House acted unanimously, not instructing its conferees to stand by this or that provision of the original House bill. This will expedite action by the conference.

Speaker Garner named Representatives Gollier of Mississippi, Crisp of Georgia, Rainey of Illinois, Democrats; and Hawley of Oregon and Treadway of Massachusets, Republicans, as conferees.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO BASIS

The Senate conferees, appointed in the early hours of today just after the Senate passed the bill, are Smoot, Watson and Reed, Republicans, and Harrison and King Democrats. Meetings will get under way without delay.

The gigantic tax raising measure, intended to provide $1,115,000,000 in new funds for the government next year will do the job of putting teh nation on a pay-as-

StateFarmMentalTest Scored by Brennan

The charge that young men who fail to pass psychopathic tests are consigned to prison in State Farm without hope of release, featured a minority report filed by James H. Brennan of the Governor's Council today.

With Councillors Chester I. Campbell and Edmund Cote, he made up a committee of three which investigated the State Farm and Norfolk prison camp after Irene Bamforth was killed by her insane father in Bridgewater Nov. 11, 1931. The majority report by Campbell and Cote will be filed later.

Councillor Brennan's report, 16 pages long, dealt with conditions many of which he said had been or would be remedied.

It also contained a denunciation of the state board of parole and its chairman, Frank A. Brooks.

NO HOPE OF RELEASE

"The mania for mental examination of prisoners has far overreached itself at the State Farm," Councillor Brennan said in the report. "Many young men, otherwise normal mentally, who fail in certain specified psychopathic tests, are adjudged by scientists to be defective and are clamped into prison without any hope of release."

He recommended that a mental re-examination be made, not alone of defective delinquents in Bridgewater, but also of the entire list of inmates of the insane criminal division, "scores of whom have been transferred from the defective delinquent division into the insane criminal division because of minor violations of rules and in some instances because of attempts to escape."

The committee learned at the outset, Brennan said, that the State Farm had expanded and outgrown itself. He said there was great closeness and laxity in the general organization and discipline and managament of the institution, especially in connection with the physical restraint of men.

5 IN FAMILY DIE IN SUICIDE PACT

New York, June 1 (AP)—Five members of one family died by gas today in what apparently was a death pact by three of them.

The act was believed to have been motivated by grief over the death of the wife and mother yesterday of pneumonia.

Those who died today were Carlos Del Rio, 55, a wholesale lingerie merchant, and his four daughters, Vincenzia, 27; Josephine, 28; Gladilupi, 23, and Mrs. Matilda Munoz, 30. They were natives of Argentina.

The father and two daughters were fully clothed in one bed. The other two were in another bed in night clothing. This fact led police to believe the latter were not party to the pact.

Today was a great day for County Waterford.

Because a Brighton colleen from there, and a South Boston man from the same sod, won $11,500 and $55,500 respectively on the great English derby.

Another winner of $55,500 is James P. Brennan, a shipbuilder, of 4 Ireland rd., Newton.

The Brighton colleen upon whom luck smiled is Anna Daly, 20, of 3 Dunboy st. The South Boston man is Thomas Hogan, 30, of 172 H st.

"Tom" Hogan is slim and young-looking, handsome and a bachelor, but he has the girl all picked out. Said Hogan:

"Now I can afford to get married."

GIRL GOING TO ERIN.

While Hogan will invest his $55,500 in marital happiness, Miss Daly will take her money to make a nice home here for her parents, who are now in County Waterford.

"I can't believe it; oh, I'm so happy," said the Brighton miss, who is attractive, with light brown hair and laughing Irish blue eyes.

"Can you beat it!" said Hogan. "I never won anything before, not even in a grab-bag."

Miss Daly had already arranged to sail Sunday on the Britannic for Ireland to visit her parents, and she will adhere to this plan.

Hogan, who is widely known as a Gaelic football star, will give up his work as a laborer at the Army Base to go to Ireland to collect his money.

Brennan was a man of mystery for a time, because he had given his address as 1691 Commonwealth

SALES TAX BACKERS DROP HOPE OF ITS PASSAGE

$1,115,000,000 BILL GOES TO CONFERENCE

Measure Carrying Vast Levy to Be Rushed Through in Fast Time

you-go basis again, assert the spokesmen for the administration.

The goal fixed yesterday by the President in his dramatic personal appearance before the Senate was quickly reached, in additions of new funds by the weary Senate last night.

Even as the Senate passed the bill, the appropriations committee reported to the Chamber the other twin of the budget balancing team—the $238,000,000 national economy measure.

It gets the right of way, beginning late today in the Senate.

HOPE TO ADJOURN

Informal assurances have been give nby the House leadership that the new budget balancing goal fixed yesterday by the President and Secretary Mills will be kept in mind in forming the final draft of the revenue measure in conference.

The headlong drive on Capital Hill which sent more than $280,000,000 new revenue into the tax bill yesterday and culminated in passage later has caused new speculation in the possibilities of adjournment by June 11—the eve of the opening of the national political conventions.

Another attempt to revive the sales tax was promised today.

Rep. Britten of Ill. told newspapermen he would use "every possible means" to insert the sales tax in the bill. It has been rejected both by the House and Senate.

"My amendment would let us insert the sales tax as originally proposed by the House ways and means committee and then amend it to eliminate the necessities of life," Britten said.

"What with all our nuisance and other excise taxes, it seems to me that we might well put in the sales tax and get a sound and sensible tax bill."

The Senate put its official stamp of disapproval on the sales tax last night when, by a vote of 53 to 27 it rejected the amendment by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts to adopt a 1 per cent manufacturers' general excise.

A dramatic appeal by Walsh failed to move the Senate. Only 27 voted for the sales tax. They were:

WIPE OUT DEFICIT

Republicans—Austin, Barbour, Bingham, Dale, Fess, Goldsborough, Hale, Hastings, Hebert, Kean, Keyes, Metcalf, Moses, Reed, Shortridge, Smoot, Vandenberg, Walcott, Watson and White, 20. Democrats—Broussard, Coolidge, Copeland, Hawks, Tydings, Wagner and Walsh of Massachusetts, 7.

A budget-balancing bill, capable of raising $1,115,000,000 in new revenue, was to be sent to conference today following its passage by the Senate.

The anticipated revenue from the measure, as approved by the Senate, would wipe out the $1,241,000,000 deficit if but $126,000,000 in governmental economies are effected.

The economy bill, however, may slash from $200,000,000 to $238,000,000 from government costs, thus giving the Treasury a safe margin on which to operate during the next fiscal year.

The tax bill was passed by the Senate, 72 to 11, shortly after midnight, following rejection of the sales tax for which President Hoover pleaded yesterday. The President's appeal went unheeded, as the opposition had killed the project Monday by obtaining pledges of 55 senators.

The Senate bill differed from the House bill in many respects. The Senate imposed a total of $277,000,000 in taxes on incomes of individuals and corporations. The House, with lower rates, would tax these items but $165,400,000.

The excise taxes imposed by the Senate would bring about $520,000,000 while those fixed by the House would total but $255,000,000. The Senate's gain included $150,000,000 through a tax of one cent a gallon on gasoline and $55,000,000 by a 3 per cent tax on the gross proceeds of privately-operated electric power companies.

The House adopted a tax of one cent a gallon on imported oil and gasoline. The Senate cut the oil rate to ½ cent, but increased the gasoline import tax to 2½ cents a gallon. It retained the House rate of $2 a ton on imported coal, but added tariffs of 4 cents a pound on imported rubber and $3 per 1000 feet on imported lumber.

SOME UNCHANGED

The miscellaneous and stamp taxes were about parallel, except that the Senate reduced the House rates on stock and bond transfers from $95,000,000 to $27,000,000. The amusement tax was increased when the Senate reduced the exemptions from 45 to 40 cents.

The Senate also slightly reduced the House rates on telephone calls telegrams and radio messages, slashing the revenue from $33,000,000 to $24,000,000.

Both House and Senate increased postal rates, increasing the first class postage rate from two to three cents. The Senate adopted the 1922 second-class rates, effecting a revenue of $160,000,000 as compared to $165,500,000 from the House rates.

There were many disputes over anticipated revenues from different taxes. Experts agreed the bill as passed by the Senate would bring in $1,115,000,000. This was subject to later revision, but the House and Senate conferees may add another $100,000,000 by accepting the higher rates which go to controversy.

Some items will not be subject to change in conference. They include the 3 per cent tax on automobiles, the 2 per cent tax on trucks, the new estate and gift taxes, the 10 per cent taxes on furs, jewelry, safe deposit boxes, sporting goods, firearms, the $2 a ton import tax on coal, the 4 cents a gallon tax on lubricating oil and the 5 per cent tax on mechanical refrigerators.

MUST WORK FAST

The Senate took 18 calendar days to pass the bill. It was introduced in the House March 7 and passed that body April 1, after a week's debate. It was sent to the Senate finance committee then and reported to the Senate May 9. Debate began May 13.

Odds still are against adjournment in time, because only 10 working days remain if members are to get away for the opening of the Republican conclave in Chicago, June 14. But despite this, and because of the militant spirit shown, a definite new hope has arisen.

This is what remains to be done before Congress can adjourn:

The tax bill must be adjusted in conference and the result agreed to by both chambers.

The economy bill reported only last night for Senate action, must be passed by the Senate and agreed to by the House.

Six or seven of the regular appropriation bills, supplying government department funds for the fiscal year beginning a month from today, must be passed by the Senate and agreed to by the House. Two such bills are in conference now.

VAGRANT SIZES UP N. E. POLICE

The hospitality of police in various New England communities varies to a marked degree as Frank L. Benninger, 19, of Louisville, Ky., can—and did—testify today.

Benninger was in East Cambridge court charged with vagrancy and Judge Walcott filed the case after hearing his story.

He set out from Louisville on May 19 with 65 cents, looking for a job. Hitch-hiking and plain hiking he visited Lexington, Ky., Cincinnati and Cleveland, slept in a parked flivver in Batavia, saw Syracuse, visited Lenox, Mass., returned to Troy and finally landed in Bennington, Vt.

There he went to police and asked for a night's lodging, and Chief Case took him home and gave him two weeks' work doing odd jobs. The Bennington police were very nice.

Last Friday night he arrived in Arlington, he said, and when it grew dark he went to the police station and asked for a night's lodging.

"The cop said, 'Sure, come right in,'" he stated. "They asked me what time I wanted to be called. I told them 7:30. They took me downstairs and I went to sleep in a cell on a cot. They called me all right the next morning, but they brought me down and slapped me into East Cambridge jail, and I've been there since."

Hospitality

Frank Benninger has started back to Kentucky. He left Louisville on May 19 with 65 cents in his pockets. For several days he has been held at East Cambridge jail. Arlington police sent him there when he applied for night's lodging. (Staff photo.)

THREE HERE WIN ON DERBY

ve., Allston, where he lived with Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKay.

It was learned today that he had gone to Maine a few days ago and that in his absence the McKays moved to the Newton address. McKay is a descendant of the famous builder of the New England clipper ships.

It was apparently a lucky omen for Brennan when his friends moved to the street with the Irish name.

The other two Boston winners, who live but a dozen miles apart here, came from towns in County Waterford only about 17 miles apart, she from Lismore and he from Dongarvan.

"I had seen Tom Hogan play football and I met him at a County Waterford dance," said Miss Daly.

They met again at the Boston Evening American radio room today, where both went on the air to tell New England of their happiness.

Afterwards the Brighton colleen revealed she had a boy friend, Daniel Mooney of Taylor st., Neponset, but they are not engaged, she said. Hogan would not reveal the name of his sweetheart.

A feature of Tom Hogan's luck was that he tried to dispose of his winning Irish Hospital Sweepstakes ticket to his friend and fellow-workman, Paul O'Leary, who would not buy it. O'Leary was first to congratulate him today.

ALL WIN ON DASTUR

The horse, Dastur, winning second place in the Derby at Epsom Downs, England, clicked off the $55,500 for Hogan in the Irish Sweepstakes, the same amount for Brannan and the $11,500 for Miss Daly for her ticket in the Canadian Army and Navy Sweepstakes.

Nobody in New England had a ticket on April The Fifth, winner of the big race, nor on Miracle or Royal Dancer, winners of third and fourth places. Seventy-one other New Englanders win consolation prizes ranging from $500 to $6000.

State and federal income taxes will reduce Hogan's winnings by about $8000 under existing rates.

"Oh, I am just too excited to talk," said Miss Daly. "I bought the ticket two months ago, but never thought it would win, although I kept it carefully.

"I have been working as a maid at $18 a week, but gave up my job temporarily in order to sail for Ireland Sunday to see my mother and father. Now, they shall come back with me to a nice home that I shall make for them.

"The address I gave on the ticket was 100 Etna st., Brighton, where I used to live with my sister, Mrs. Patrick Madden. Now I live with another sister, Mrs. James Martin. I have another sister, Mrs. Francis Naylor of Aberdeen rd., Somerville.

"I came here from Ireland five years ago and like it ever so well. I wouldn't think of living anywhere but Boston."

HOGAN TO QUIT JOB

Hogan, who was found carrying lumber for the Shipping Board at the Army Base, attired in blue shirt, sweater and khaki trousers was equally dumbfounded.

"I can't believe it. It sure is great," he said. "I've taken chances on a lot of things in my life but never won before. I'll be making a trip to Ireland soon. I've been over here seven years. My parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Hogan, and my two brothers are still there."

Hogan's boss described him as "a wonderful fellow and the best workman I have." Hogan lives with his uncle, John F. Hogan, and is fullback on the Cork Gaelic football team of Boston.

He is dark, with a great shock of black hair, keen eyes and a ruddy complexion, which became ruddier as he parried questions about the sweetheart whom he refused to name.

Miss Daly was the only New Englander to win a major prize in the Canadian Sweepstakes. It was at first reported she had won $37,000 but announcement was made at Montreal of the smaller amount. Nick Roesner, New York, and Mary Costigan of St. Lambert, Canada, who held tickets on April the Fifth, will receive $22,500 each.

GARNER RELIEF BILL BACKED BY LABOR

But Hushing Tells Committee $600,000 Is Required for Direct Aid to Idle

Washington, June 1 (INS)—Complete endorsement of the Garner relief program was given today by organized labor.

W. C. Hushing, legislative representative of the A. F. of L., told the House ways and means committee the bill was a national necessity, but that the $100,000,000 for direct relief should be increased to $600,000,000. He also warned there must be a limitation as to days and hours of labor on the public works projects to prevent them from being pushed through hastily and increasing unemployment.

EARNINGS CUT $11,000,000

"President Green has estimated that if work were limited on these projects to 35 hours a week there would be no unemployment," Hushing said.

He said labor has been trying to impress on Congress for two years the fact that the earnings of working people have been reduced $11,000,000 a year.

"Little attention has been paid to us," he continued. "The only relief has been to big business and the banks. Nothing has been done to relieve the unemployed except to give them a few million bushels of wheat.

BILL GIVES HOPE

"The Garner bill now gives some hope. It is absolutely necessary that it be passed. It should have been done long ago."

Hushing said his figures indicated 8,000,000 wholly unemployed, excluding so-called white-collar men, and that 16,000,000 are in need of direct relief. He asked that Congress place some safeguards around the rivers and harbors and roads propect to keep contractors from employing men at "starvation wages."

WEYMOUTH IN NEW AID ROW

The town of Weymouth is in difficulties again over the outsiders within its midst to whom it is giving aid.

Town Accountant Dizer has notified the selectmen that after June 7 he cannot honor any more bills in payment of welfare aid given 40 families registered in other cities, $50,000 for this purpose having been expended.

As a result the selectmen will ask the appropriating committee for an additional appropriation of $15,000 to take care of the families in question.

How New Federal Tax Bill Hits Your Own Pocketbook

Washington, June 1 (INS)—The small income taxpayer was hit hard when the Senate adopted the 1922 rates, Treasury statistics revealed today.

A comparison of normal rates follows:

Net Income	Present Law	House Bill	Senate Bill
First $4000.......	1½ per cent	2 per cent	4 per cent
Next $4000.......	3 per cent	4 per cent	8 per cent
Above $8000......	5 per cent	7 per cent	8 per cent

Both House and Senate bills allow exemptions of $1000 to single persons and $2500 to married persons as compared to $1500 and $3500 in existing law. Under the Senate bill, the exemption for married persons is cut to $2000 if the income exceeds $5000.

The 25 per cent earned income reduction, allowed in present law, which the House reduced to 12½ per cent, was entirely eliminated from the Senate bill. The surtaxes, starting at $10,000 and running up to 20 per cent under existing law, would start at $6000 under both House and Senate bills, and run up to 40 per cent in the House bill and to 55 per cent in the Senate bill.

A comparison of the income tax to be paid by a married person, with no dependents, under each of the schedules, follows:

Income	Present Law	House Bill	Senate Bill
$3,000	0	$2.50	$20
$4,000	$5.63	20.00	60
$5,000	16.88	37.50	100
$6,000	28.13	55.00	160
$8,000	56.25	120.00	340
$10,000	101.25	210.00	520
$20,000	618.75	1,160.00	1,720
$30,000	1,438.75	2,260.00	3,520
$50,000	4,588.75	7,160.00	8,640
$100,000	15,768.75	23,560.00	30,140
$500,000	115,758.75	214,560.00	263,640
$1,000,000	240,768.75	449,560.00	571,140

Power of Gangland Crushed Under New Revenue Bill

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Invoking the age-old axiom that the power to tax is the power to destroy, the Senate wrote into the revenue bill last night a 100 per cent tax upon all incomes obtained by crime.

If this outright confiscation of the literal wages of sin remains in the bill, the gangster, bootlegger, narcotic distributor and gambling syndicate will be at the utter mercy of the federal Government's most effective weapon for crushing the power of the underworld lord.

BLOW AT GANGDOM.

Senator Glenn of Illinois, the State that has suffered so conspicuously from gangland, put the harsh provision into the bill without meeting a solitary objection. He called upon the Government to end the "partnership" with crime which he charged it exercises in accepting the same share of vice-tainted profits that it demands of the man who earns his money within the law.

Hitherto law violators with conspicuous earnings have been able to protect themselves by boldly declaring their occupation and their income to the Internal Revenue Bureau and paying tax, without fear that the returns could be used to prosecute them.

POWER IS SNASHED

Where they failed to do so, the government has succeeded in using the income tax law to imprison gang leaders and smash their power in cases where the terror of gangland guns and torture made impossible the gathering of evidence to convict them of the crimes which yielded the income.

Under the new tax the criminals' one avenue to safety will be closed. They will not dare to file true returns, but will have to hide their now blatantly proclaimed occupations.

ELLIS LOVE SUIT IS SETTLED

On the eve of his departure for Europe, it was learned today that the $250,000 alienation of affections suit brought by Harold H. Ellis of St. Paul st., Brookline, against Eliot R. Fowle, millionaire West Newton man, has been settled out of court.

Although Atty. William D. Todd counsel for Ellis, refused to discuss the case, it was learned that settlement was for a substantial amount in favor of the Brookline man.

The suit was brought last January, Ellis charging that Fowle, his best friend, had stolen the affections of his wife, Mrs. Gwendolyn Ellis.

He said when he believed Mrs. Ellis was visiting friends in the West he learned she had divorced him in Reno and married Fowle, understood to be away for his health.

Fowle is 51 and the former Mrs. Ellis is 35. Fowle is a retired investment broker. He has an estate on Buzzards Bay and owns a yacht. Ellis is about a dozen years Fowle's junior.

Former Greek Dictator Ordered Into Exile

Athens, Greece, June 1—Gen. Theodorus Pangalos, former dictator of Greece, will be banished to the Island of Corfu, if a decision by the council of defense is upheld.

Gen. Pangalos

The decision came yesterday apparently as a consequence of reported subversive activities by Pangalos. He was given a week in which to appeal.

Gen. Pangalos and 27 others were arrested in 1930 in what was alleged to have been a conspiracy to reinstate him at the head of the government. He was later released and left the country for a time.

Mrs. Marsh Sues Mate in Fight Over Fortune

New York, June 1—Henry W. Marsh, president of the Whitney Corporation of Rhode Island, has been sued in Supreme Court by his estranged wife, Mrs. Agnes E. Marsh, in connection with a trust fund which once approached $2,000,000.

Mrs. Agnes Marsh

In an examination before trial yesterday Mrs. Marsh asked that Marsh be removed as trustee of the fund because of his "temperament" and be forced to render an accounting.

Mrs. Marsh alleged her husband set up the trust to provide her with an income of $50,000 a year and to furnish her sister, Genevieve Wilkinson, with an annual income. The defendant denied he formed the fund for his wife's benefit and set forth it was designed to provide against her "extravagances."

WOMAN IS NEAR DEATH IN FLAMING NIGHTDRESS

BED SET AFIRE BY CIGARETTE IN HOTEL

Mrs. Floyd Runs From Room a "Human Torch"; Name on Danger List at Hospital

Enveloped in flames, which started from a forgotten cigarette, Mrs. Allen Floyd, 26, was seriously burned about the head, throat, arms and body early today in her apartment at the Hotel Gralyn, Charlesgate West, Back Bay.

She beat out the flames, then ran into the hall with her negligee still smoldering. Firemen and hotel employes gave her first aid and she was taken to City Hospital where her name is on the danger list.

HUSBAND WATCHING BLAZE.

Her husband was out at the time watching firemen battle a two-alarm blaze in an apartment block on Newbury st., around the corner from the hotel.

During the excitement attendant on this fire, a hotel employe, who was also watching the firemen, happened to look back at the hotel and saw smoke issuing from windows on the fourth floor.

He told firemen and then ran to inform Robert Johnson, manager of the Gralyn, who was manning the switchboard, to calm any guests who might become excited because of the nearby fire.

Johnson hurried to the fourth floor and said he met Mrs. Floyd coming down the corridor, her negligee still smouldering.

CIGARETTE FIRES BED

Investigation, according to Johnson, indicated that she had taken a bath and left a cigarette where it set fire to the bedding.

When she opened the bathroom door, this created a draft which swept the flames upon her. Her husband could not be found to be informed of his wife's plight until after she had been taken to the hospital.

Mrs. Floyd was carried to the hotel lobby on a mattress and then taken to the hospital.

A fireman on duty at Newbury st. and Charlesgate West, meanwhile had sounded an alarm for the blaze, the third to be sent from that box within an hour. Apparatus was rushed to the scene and extra police from downtown stations were also sent into the Back Bay, it being thought that a serious fire was raging.

Some 60 guests of the hotel were roused by the excitement and many of them fled down to the street floor, only lightly clad. Hotel attaches and firemen, however, assured them there was no danger.

Hotel officials said Mrs. Floyd and her husband, representative of a Detroit auto concern, registered at the hotel a week ago.

Damage at the Gralyn was estimated at $1500.

The Newbury st. blaze broke out in a four-story apartment building at No. 534. The fire started between the third and fourth floors and broke into the top floor apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hill. Mrs. Helen Foster, 65, suffering from rheumatism, was carried to safety by the Hills.

Then he hopes to make up some of the schooling he missed when circumstances forced him to leave Erin and come to America.

Paul O'Leary, Hogan's fellow workman, congratulates him on his good luck. Hogan offered to sell O'Leary half the ticket he held in the race, but O'Leary couldn't be persuaded. Today he'd be $27,750 to the good if he had any confidence in Hogan's luck and would be sharing Hogan's excitement and good fortune. (Staff photos.)

POLICE IN DRIVE ON SPEEDERS

The new State-wide campaign on motor violations, planned by the Governor's committee on street and highway safety, got under way today, with all police departments checking violators.

The drive will last six months, special red tickets being issued for speeding, cutting in, failing to keep to the right, failing to slow down at intersections, failing to slow down for pedestrians, violation of the eight-foot law on standing street cars, violation of traffic control devices, and dangerous and improper parking.

The first motorist checked by Boston police was Mrs. Clara Billings of the Back Bay, who was given a red ticket in Berkeley st. by Traffic Officer Kilty. Mrs. Billings was warned she was going too fast under existing conditions, the type of violation to be concentrated on during June.

Three classes of violations are indicated on the tickets for this offense. First, in residential districts; second, in business or congested districts, and third, near schools.

BOSTON COUPLE ARE HUNTED

San Francisco, June 1 (INS)—Search for Allan B. Monks, member of a socially prominent Boston family, and a woman officials said was his wife, was being made by police today.

Monks, who came to California to engage in ranching, disappeared under mysterious circumstances some weeks ago from San Diego, it was revealed. Search for him has been carried on secretly.

Disclosure of the hunt was made when Thomas Whelan, district attorney of San Diego, telephoned to authorities at Redwood City, south of here, saying that Mrs. Monks was wanted on a bad check charge and for questioning in connection with Monks' disappearance.

The woman, formerly known as the "San Diego Cantaloupe Queen," was at Redwood City May 20, together with another man and a Japanese chauffeur, authorities said.

The other man is Alfred I. Sawyer, San Diego accountant, arrested on a bad check charge. He is still in jail at Redwood City awaiting trial.

Monks is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Monks, who lived for many years in Marlboro st., Back Bay.

He left Boston about 30 years ago and has visited here rarely since that time. Among his relatives who inaugurated the search for him is Archibald G. Monks of Kendall Green, Waltham, who said today the missing man had not visited relatives for many years.

CURLEY URGES MAYORS BACK HEARST PLAN

Detroit, June 1 (INS)—Recognizing their duty to the great army of unemployed, mayors of more than a score of large cities met today to devise a program for relief.

The national mayors' conference, first of its kind ever held, was called by Mayor Frank Murphy of Detroit. He issued invitations to mayors of cities with 100,000 or more population and 27 accepted.

Relief for the taxpayers was to be discussed in connection with proposed amendments to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. act, whereby cities could refund part of their indebtedness which curtails essential services and adds to local tax burdens on real estate.

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston led in a discussion of unemployment and tax problems expressing fear for the coming winter in reference to public welfare funds and closed with a demand for a adoption of a construction program like that proposed in the $5,000,000,000 bond issue plan of William Randolph Hearst.

MAYOR CURLEY'S ADDRESS

Mayor Curley said:

"Every thoughtful citizen and more particularly those charged with the responsibility of teh administration of cities and towns are not only disturbed as to the present situation with reference to increasing costs to provide for the unemployed, but are fearful of the coming winter.

"The present industrial depression differs materially from any similar catastrophe that has been visited upon our country in that it is now entering the fourth year, with unemployment increasing, wit hthe demands for aid from the victims of our social and economic systems increasing and with no immediate prospects of relief.

"With employment gone; with ready funds gone; with reserves gone through bank failures, and with no construction program of sufficient magnitude either to provide relief or to restore confidence and faith in the future, there is but on avenue remaining for those in need and that avenue is the public welfare department in each community.

"The result has been a 50 per cent increase in demands during 1929; a 150 per cent increase in 1930; 300 per cent in 1931, and with every indication of a 500 per cent increase in 1932 over the amount found necessary in any year prior to 1929.

"Organized money during the past 20 years has been gradually shifting the burden of taxation until today real estate bears 70 per cent of the total costs of government, while organized money bears not in excess of 20 per cent.

SPEAKS FOR HEARST PLAN.

"Entering the fourth year of likelihood that the home owners of America will be unable to pay their tax obligations. It is likewise probable that cities and towns of America will be unable to procure either through taxation or bond issues the funds necessary for the conduct of municipal activities.

"For a period of three years one of America's leading publishers has insistently and incessantly demanded the adoption of a $5,000,000,000 construction program, and provided the nation had embarked upon this program with the same high courage and sublime faith that we embarked upon similar programs during the period of the World War the depression would today be but an unpleasant memory rather than a stern foreboding reality.

"The time for the adoption of a major construction program is now and we, the mayors of American cities, who have been living with this depression and its misery and woe now entering the fourth year, should give hearty endorsement to such a program without delay."

WORLD PARLEY PLANS VAGUE

London, June 1 (INS)—The proposal for a world conference aimed at stabilization of commodity prices "has not yet advanced beyond the informal and entirely preliminary stage," Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, told the House of Commons today.

Sir John was questioned regarding the proposed conference by George Lansbury, Laborite opposition leader.

Sir John pointed out that the objects of the Lausanne conference were not the settlement of reparations "but agreement on measures necessary to solve other economic and financial difficulties which were responsible for it and which might prolong the world crisis."

"Unless, therefore, the United States sends representatives to the second part of the Lausanne conference," he said, "there is danger of overlapping."

While both the British and American governments credited the other with the idea, unconfirmed reports hinted that United States Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon was responsible for the proposed international conference to consider methods of stabilizing world commodity prices.

Charles Baker, American river boatpilot, kidnaped by Communist bandits and held for nearly six months under a continual death threat, was released today through the efforts of Findlay Andrew, a British missionary and flood relief worker. Andrew paid a large ransom in wheat with the consent of the American consul in Hankow.

Baker, while in captivity, sent several pleading letters to friends and consular officials, asking them to bring about his release. He told of being ill and of receiving rough treatment at the hands of his captors, who demanded ransoms of various amounts, ranging from $10,000,000 down to $10,000.

At one time Americans met the bandits far up the Yangtze river, near almost impenetrable hills in which Baker was kept, and were induced to pay $10,000 when Baker was brought into sight on the shore and his release was promised.

After the money was paid, however, the Reds fled with their captive and sent out further demands for ransom money.

HUSBAND HELD IN DEATH PLOT

Charles A. McTague, 24, Lynn drug clerk, who is alleged to have attempted to chloroform his young wife, Helen, a dancer, was held for the grand jury in $5000 in Lynn District Court today. He admitted sufficient evidence for a finding of probable cause on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

His wife, with whom he had become reconciled and has been living with while at liberty in bail since his arrest on May 21, was in court. Police said he admitted having tried to chloroform her as the result of an argument over whether she should attend public dances while he worked nights in a drugstore.

BROMLEY WON'T FLY SEA IN FUN

Burbank, Cal., June 1 (AP)—With no prize for a successful transpacific flight, Harold Bromley does not desire to attempt it.

"That lets me out. I can't see trying it for fun," the Texas flier said when informed, five minutes after ending a transcontinental flight for a $29,500 prize offered by Seattle aviation enthusiasts would not be extended beyond midnight tonight.

The prize donors stipulated a start at Seattle and arrival at Tokio.

But Bromley found some consolation in the low cost of his flight from New York, which started Monday morning.

"It cost me only $18 for fuel," he said. "I burned about 300 gallons of low grade oil flying a route of nearly 2708 miles."

Safe That Cost $5 Proves to Be Unsafe and Costly

The safe—it turned out today—that Frank Secatore bought in East Boston turned out to be far from safe, and where it cost Frank only $5 for the safe in the first place, it cost him another $5 to rescue it and cost also one of his helpers two crushed fingers.

Frank, who owns the Maverick Battery Company in Maverick sq., purchased the 2000-pound safe in an auction at the Columbia Leather Company, across the square.

Volunteers—20 of them—were shunting the safe across the square when it got away from them and rolled down the incline of East Boston tunnel, blocking the inbound rails.

Before it was removed traffic was tied up. James Mullen of 16 Princeton st. had suffered two crushed fingers and Frank had paid another $5 to a moving company to haul it out of the subway.

HITLER DECIDES NOT TO FIGHT VON PAPEN

Berlin, June 1 (AP)—Adolf Hitler, former Austrian army corporal, who threatened to block the efforts of generals of the Kaiser's old imperial army in their efforts to form a new German cabinet, was inclined to change his mind today, leaders of his National Socialist party indicated.

Hitler's headquarters announced late last night the Nazis would not support a cabinet formed by Franz von Papen, former officer on the general staff of the Imperial Army, who was selected by President Paul von Hindenburg, former field marshal, to succeed Dr. Heinrich Bruening as chancellor.

NEUTRAL POLICY

Today, however, later counsels in the Nazi camp tended toward a policy of neutrality toward a Von Papen cabinet until such time as new general elections are most convenient, which, it was said, probably would be after harvest time when the farmers would have time to listen to political speeches.

The final decision of the Nazi position is still to be made formally however.

FEUDAL CABINET SEEN

As a result of the new Nazi attitude the Von Papen cabinet seemed today to have a chance of governing Germany, at least for a short time. The newspapers dubbed it a "feudal" cabinet on account of the prospect of its being dominated by members of the old German nobility.

If Hitler's decision to oppose the cabinet had held he probably would have had little trouble defeating it on a vote of no confidence in the Reichstag. To do so would have required gathering 177 votes to join with his 107 Nazi strength. To furnish these 177 votes he would have 143 Socialists, 77 Communists and 68 Centrists to draw upon.

HAD GREAT TIME, SAYS AMELIA

London, June 1 (AP)—Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, first woman to fly the Atlantic, proved her prowess on a ballroom dance floor last night. It was revealed today she was one of the most popular guests at a hospital charity ball.

Mrs. Putnam agreed today she "had a great time."

Shortly after her arrival she was escorted to the table of the Prince of Wales, and after talking pleasantly for a few moments, the couple swung away on the dance floor.

So pleased with the flier's dancing was the Prince that twice again the heir to the British throne asked Mrs. Putnam for dances.

The blonde aviatrix was attired in a becoming evening dress of green, which is now called "Atlantic green."

Maj. Deardon, Ware Publisher, Weds

Ware, June 1 (AP)—The marriage of Maj. William H. Dearden, editor of the Ware River News, and Miss Alma E. Renaud took place today in the rectory of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church. They sail from New York Saturday for a honeymoon in Paris.

Maj. Dearden received his early training as a reporter in Springfield and served as Boston and Washington correspondent.

Greenlaw's Secret Wedding Revealed After Lynn Game

"Well, I guess I'll have to run home to the wife."

They eloped to New Hampshire and were married by a justice of the peace and on the following day were married by Rev. Dennis J. Murray, curate of St. Pius Church, Lynn. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patten of 25 Hillside ave. Greenlaw is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Greenlaw of 419 Chatham st.

Amelia Earhart Putnam Finds Britons Are Tireless Hosts to American Flying Heroine

Amelia Earhart Putnam, shown with the children of her hostess, Mrs. Gallagher, of Springfield, Londonderry, near whose home she landed on her spectacular Atlantic hop, the first to be achieved by a lone woman. Mrs. Putnam flew the Atlantic in 15½ hours, establishing a record. (International News Photos.)

An audience with the Prince of Wales was the cause of this shopping trip by the "Lady Lindy." Mrs. Putnam thought she would be out of place in flying togs. She bought several gowns and other apparel for the many public appearances she was forced to make. (International News Photos.)

Here's the American aviatrix doing a little shopping. She needed a new hat and new clothes because all the clothes she brought with her on her flight were her flying togs. She was forced to borrow clothes from her friends at the Embassy in London to make her first public appearance.

Seabury Claims Walker's Removal Now Justified

County Court House, New York, June 1 (INS)—A sensation was sprung at the Hofstadter legislative inquiry today when Samuel Seabury directly charged that Mayor James J. Walker had violated the law which forbids any city official from owning stock in any company which is interested in contracts awarded by the city, and pointed out that the penalty for such violation was "forfeiture of office."

Seabury produced evidenced designed to show that dividends from the Reliance Bond & Steel Co. were deposited to Mayor Walker's account in the Federation Bank and Trust Company in December, 1930, and that the following month the Reliance Company was awarded a city contract.

The contract was "for furnishing and delivering to the police department 104 bronze traffic standards on Fifth ave. as per specifications."

The Reliance Co., it was testified on the stand today by Harry J. Rosenbloom, treasurer of the Reliance Co., a "surprise witness," received $43,556 from the city by virtue of the contract.

Mayor Walker, when he was on the stand last week, admitted receiving Reliance bonds from J. A. Sisto, a broker, but explained that he turned them over to Mrs. Walker and that she deposited the coupons in her account.

Seabury, after introducing the Reliance bonds evidence addressed the nine members of the committee.

"I say, it's grounds for removal for the mayor of this city to hold bonds of a company doing business with the city."

BOSTON FIRM IN BRIBE TRIAL

Mineola, N. Y., June 1 (AP)—Allen S. Locke, counsel for the firm of Kenny Brothers & Wolkins of Boston, testified today at the trial of Henry Foster, charged with accepting $1600 to vote a $110,000 furniture contract to the Boston concern for the Sewanaka High School, that Foster admitted receiving the money, but "accepted it as a gift." Foster formerly was president of the Sewanaka High School board.

The alleged $1600 bribe was paid in two installments to Foster by John C. Collins, a salesman for the Boston concern, after the contract had been awarded, Locke said Foster told him.

Dorchester Burglar Suspects Are Held

Charged with breaking and entering, Thomas A. Coan, 21, of Millwood ter., and John Jaeger, of Whitfield st., both Dorchester, were held in $2500 each for the grand jury when arraigned today in Dorchester court.

The pair were arrested early today by the new police cruising squad recently assigned to Dorchester. They were captured after Mrs. Sadie Segal, of Wheatland st., reported she saw two men in the cellar of her home.

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Life in Old Game Yet. ↕ Ruth and Brick Owen.
Moriarty Bout Proves. Klem vs. Senor Luque.
Other Diamond Scraps. Hurst vs. Elberfield.

Picking Two All Americans Bad Headwork

Well, well, well, there's life in the old game yet. It takes a pleasant little altercation like that betwixt and between belligerent George Moriarty—Are you there Mor-r-riar-r-rty?—and the warring White Sox to keep the pre-Volsteadian kick in baseball. A bit of scrapping now and then is relished by the best of men, as Moriarty, himself, who is a poet and a writer, as well as being an ex-ball player, manager and umpire, would say. One Round Georgie had a reputation as a scrapper from his earliest playing days. When third-basing for Detroit he used to have to lick Ty Cobb every day and twice on Sunday. But the Georgia Peach never would quit. He always came back for more. It would take nine pages in the record book to list all of Ty's defeats by Moriarty. Only once did Ty refuse to knock off the chip Moriarty toted on his shoulder. That was the day here at Fenway Park when Cobb waited under the grandstand to "get" Umpire George Hildebrand. Moriarty went under the stand, too, and told Cobb that if Ty was going to lick Hildebrand he'd have to lick a gent by the name of Moriarty first. For the first and only time in their long feud Cobb refused the gauge of battle.

This time Mister Moriarty wound up in the hospital. It was coming to him. George has been ragging the players all season and inviting them to put up their dukes. But why, oh why, did Moriarty pick out two former All-America football ends like Charlie Berry and Frank Grube? That was bad headwork and bad for the health. Socking Milt Gaston, who is tall, willowy, and not far from frail, was good ring generalship. But not when Berry and Grube were waiting in the offing. Charlie, one of Lafayette's greatest football heroes, was Walter Camp's last All-America end. Grube followed Berry off the Lafayette flank into an All-American position. Moriarty should have known those were two fellows, especially Berry, better left alone. His old sparring partner, Ty Cobb, could have told him that. Berry almost killed Cobb the first game Charlie caught for the Red Sox.

From recent happenings it would seem that the ball players are taking John McGraw's early season remarks seriously. If you recall it, John declared that present day players were too ladylike and effete. He said old-timers had more ounces of real scrap in their little fingers than present day players have in their whole anatomies. Since John made those remarks, Durocher of the Reds knocked Bartel of the Phils for a goal and Buddy Meyer choked Lou Gehrig. Umpires Quigley and Reardon had their troubles keeping Al Spohrer and Joe Stripp from doing a Sharkey-Schmeling here at Braves Field. Only last Sunday Dick Nallin had to break up threatened hostilities between Eddie Connolly and Jimmie Dykes. Willie Kamm and Berry have had a couple of perfectly bee-oo-tiful scraps, too.

Babe Ruth and Brick Owen figured in a famous shindy here at Fenway Park. You will recall the incident for it preceded that no-hit game of Ernie Shore. Babe was a pitcher then. When Owen called four balls on the first batter up Babe rushed in from the mound and socked Brick right on the whiskers. Brick banished Babe to the bastile. Carrigan had no one warmed up, but rushed Shore in cold. Ernie proceeded to retire the next 26 batters. The guy Ruth franked to first, according to Owen, died stealing. For years they refused to give Shore credit for the no-hit game, but the record compilers finally capitulated and it now is on the books

Not so long after the Ruth episode Owen figured in another battle here. In a game between the Red Sox and Yankees Owen called a lot of balls which looked like strikes to Bob Shawkey. Finally after the Sox had scored a few runs Owen called a player out on strikes. Shawkey gave a courtly, sweeping bow in acknowledgement. Owen considered himself insulted and gave Shawkey the gate. Bob rushed at Owen and socked him on the beezer. Brick took off his mask and beaned Bob with it, opening an ugly gash. Wasn't that a nice, gentle, friendly-like argument?

One of the most famous scraps between an umpire and a player was that between Bill Klem and Senor Adolphe Luque of the Reds. Senor Luque had a habit of cussing out Klem in flowery and lurid Castilian. Bill stood it until he happened to come across a volume of "Spanish At First Sight." Bill learned a few naughty Spanish words himself. He tried 'em out on Luque under the stand at Redland and Luque suddenly turned Irish and hung one on Bill's jaw. Bill hung it right back. It was such a perfectly wonderful scrap that everyone wanted to get in it. The weird part of it was that Klem in his report to President Heydler suggested that both he and Luque be fined and suspended. Heydler took Klem at his word.

Tim Hurst—green be the turf above him—got into almost as many scraps as the venerable Honest John Kelly, the umpire who became one of the country's biggest gamblers. In addition to his reals fights Tim used to stage "fake" ones with Kid Elberfield. In those days they didn't have Sunday baseball in New York. They did have Sunday soccer games. And Tim was the most sought for soccer referee. So whenever the team was in the West and Tim wanted to get back to New York for a Sunday to pick up $100 umpiring a soccer game he used to call his friend Elberfield, the Tobasco Kid, to the rescue.

"Now Kid, I wanna get back to New York on Sunday," Tim would coax. "I'm going to call you out. You get up and raise a roar. Make a couple of passes at me and make it look good. Hit me on the chin—but pull your punches. Pull your punches or I might get a bit riled myself. Now all I'll do is to suspend you for a couple of days and fine you $25. Here's your 25 You'll get a couple of days' vacation. They'll lay me off for a couple of days and I can go on to New York and pick up that hundred."

"What could be sweeter, Tim," Elberfield would say. And so Tim and the Tobasco Kid would have their "scrap." They pulled them off all one season before the officials got wise to what was doing.

Catholic League Teams in Action

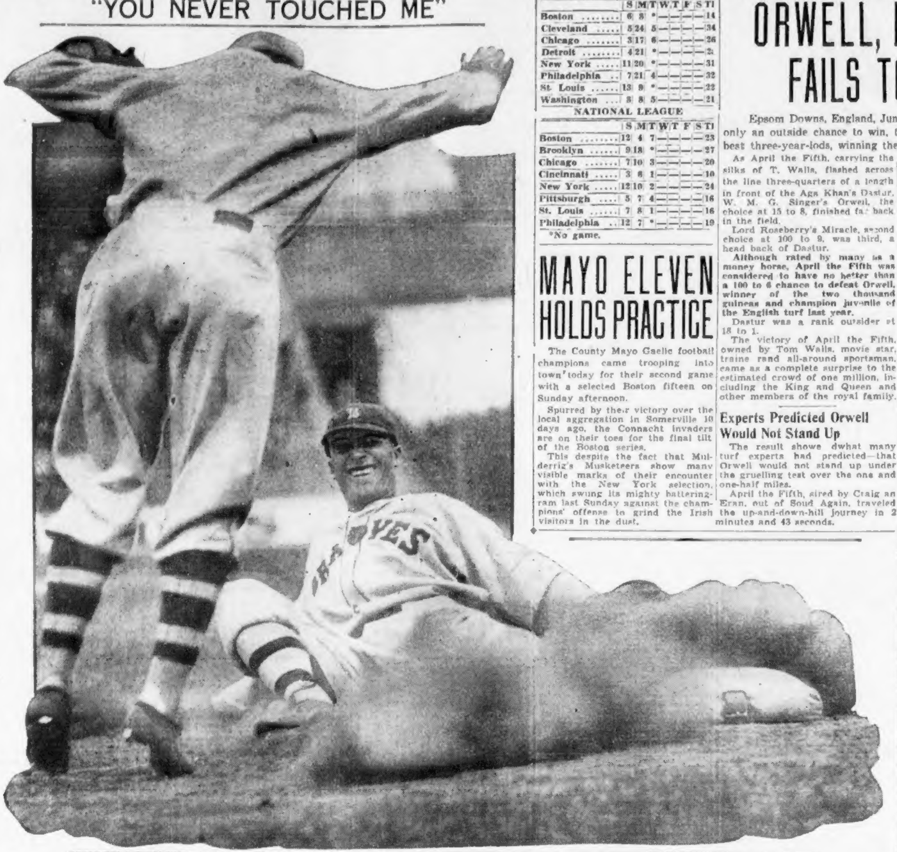
EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

"YOU NEVER TOUCHED ME"



The Braves are riding high, spikes and all these days. The Tribe players are causing the opposition plenty of worry whenever they get on base. Ever since Art Shires was hurt in collision with Joe Stripp of the Dodgers the locals have thrown precaution to the wind and are running the bases like Ty Cobb. The above photo shows Wally Berger sliding into third base with Johnny Vergez, hot corner guardian for the Giants, just missing possible injury. Wally had a big day with the bludgeon. He hit a double, triple and batted in two runs.

'Gentleman Jack' Host to Szabo at Garden

By RINGSIDE.

"Gentleman" Jack Washburn of Los Angeles will be turned loose in the Boston Garden again tonight. Officially "Gentleman" Jack is booked to clash with Sandor Szabo, Hungarian champion, in a finish bout, best two falls out of three.

Before Washburn completes his evening's work he probably will stage a few battles with the referee as well as test his strength against a regiment or so of cops. The "One Man Riot" has a craving for action, and doesn't care a bit how he gets it.

Washburn recently stated he intended to set himself up as world's champion if he cannot get bouts with Jim Londos, Strangler Lewis and Henri DeGlane. He has been quite silent to the challenge tossed at him by Charley Strack, but maybe this is merely due to the fact that the Oklahoma warrior is only a runner-up for the title.

"Cannonball" Hickman Meets "Soft Drink"

Szabo intends to try to tame Washburn tonight. The Hungarian charges he received a raw deal in his recent meeting with Washburn. He now plans to even things up.

Herman "Cannonball" Hickman of Tennessee will oppose "Koko Kola" Kwariani of Russia in a special bout.

Hickman is one of the most promising of the younger crop of heavyweights, and looks as if he is going places. Kwariani will give him a severe test tonight. There will be six prelims. Red Sox and Senators will be the guests of Toots Mondt.

Jack Conway Picks Washburn to Defeat Szabo

I resorted to my magic coin for my selection at the Garden tonight. After giving it three tosses the gods of luck pick Jack Washburn to whip Sandor Szabo. Washburn has been the choice of the coin in all but one instance, when the precious metal flipped for Londos. My lucky charm has erred but a few times since I last seen my Hindu friend. Conway's record for 1932:

W	L	P. C.
44	9	.830

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Heinie Manush, Senators—Clouted home run and triple, latter blow beating Athletics in 12th.

Lonnie Warneke, Cubs—Subdued Cardinals, 3-1, on six hits.

Ted Lyons, White Sox—Pitched effectively with men on bases to beat Indians and drove in two runs with single.

Fritz Knothe, Braves—Accounted for five runs against Giants with home run and triple.

Larry French, Pirates—Stopped Reds cold with men on bases and beat them, 4-1.

HARRIDGE FINES WHITE SOX

Cleveland, O., June 1 (US)—William Harridge, president of the American league, penalized the four White Sox baseball players taking part in an attack upon Umpire George Moriarty and severely reprimanded Moriarty for his conduct.

His statement said:

"During my twenty-one years in baseball I have no recollection of an incident such as occurred after the second game of the Decoration Day doubleheader between the Chicago White Sox and the Cleveland club in the city of Cleveland.

"After making a thorough study of the umpire's report, consulting with officials and players of the Chicago ball club and officials of the Cleveland club I have come to the following conclusions, so as to eliminate, if possible, a recurrence of the affair.

"The following penalties have been imposed:

"Pitcher Milton Gaston is suspended for 10 days and fined $500;

"Manager Lew Fonseca is fined $500;

"Catcher Berry is fined $250, and

"Catcher Grube is fined $100.

"Umpire George Moriarty has been severely reprimanded for his neglect of duty on the ball field.

"The umpire's report indicates that Pitcher Gaston was the only player actually involved in the fisticuffs.

"I am convinced that if the other players penalized had been a little more alert they could, to a great degree, have prevented what happened.

"The delay in the above action was due to the inability of the umpire to make a prompt report owing to his injury and to my desire to make a thorough personal investigation."

President Harridge also announced that Coach Butler of the Chicago White Sox had been suspended for five days without pay for his actions and use of profane language to Umpire Moriarty.

Red Sox Open Series With Solons Today

By JOE CASHMAN

Life for our Boston ball clubs is just one train ride after another these days.

The Red Sox, who left town only last Saturday, are back today for six games in four afternoons with the Washington Senators.

The Braves, after two days at the Wigwam, are on their way to Brooklyn, where they are carded to play five games in three days, starting tomorrow.

Next Sunday the local entries will shift again, but after that the Tribe will be at home and the Fenway flock away until the last day of the month.

The Collinsmen and Solons have four scheduled games and two postponements to play. There will be a single game today, a doubleheader tomorrow, a single game Friday and another twin-bill on Saturday.

Though they haven't been able to draw any closer to the rest of the field, the Sox have been looking better for the past ten days. They have been hitting harder and their pitching has been considerably more effective than it was during the first few weeks of the campaign.

The natives don't figure to do much gaining at the expense of the Solons, yet they should make it far more interesting for the visitors than they did in previous meetings.

Sox Better Than Record Indicates

The Sox are not a great ball club but they are much better than their record indicates, and if they can ever win three or four games in a row and acquire a little faith in themselves, some other club will finish in that American League cellar.

Danny MacFayden, who won 16 games last season, but is still looking for his second victory in this campaign, will draw the hurling assignment this p. m.

The Somerville boy's poor showing to date is not entirely his fault though he must accept some of the blame.

He pitched very well in some games and lost because his mates couldn't do any hitting or insisted upon handing the opposition the verdict on a platter.

In other games he was given enough runs to win and accorded perfect support only to lose because he couldn't get anybody out.

His opponent today will probably be Monte Weaver, the circuit's prize rookie hurler of the season, who scored his first big league victory at the expense of the Collinsmen and has been winning frequently ever since.

Braves Manage to Halt Losing Streak

Our Braves escaped being massacred by the Giants by grabbing off the final game of the series, 7 to 2, with Ed Brandt pitching his best ball and Fritz Knothe hammering out a home run and a triple and driving home four markers.

The victory left the Warriors 2½ games back of the Cubs, who edged out the Cards, and enabled them to pull three games away from the third-place Reds and Pirates, who became deadlocked when the latter whipped the former.

Hal Schumacher did the Giants' pitching. He was hit hard and often but with perfect support might have won and given the visitors a clean sweep in the three-game engagement.

The Braves scored twice in the third as a result of a triple by Wally Berger, a long fly which both Ott and Lindstrom went after and then quit on as they neared the centerfield fence.

Knothe's homer with two on accounted for three of the four runs the Warriors made in the fourth, but the side should have been retired before a tally registered.

With the bases loaded and one out, Brandt hit to Schumacher, who threw to the plate, forcing Schulmerich but Hogan, trying to double up the pitcher at first, hit him in the back with the ball. This miscue made it possible for Shires to count and let Knothe step up and drive the ball into the leftfield stands.

The final Braves' run in the sixth was the result of a walk to Hargrave and Knothe's triple.

MAYO ELEVEN HOLDS PRACTICE

The County Mayo Gaelic football champions came trooping into town today for their second game with a selected Boston fifteen on Sunday afternoon.

Spurred by their victory over the local aggregation in Somerville 10 days ago, the Connacht invaders are on their toes for the final tilt of the Boston series.

This despite the fact that Mulderrig's Musketeers show many visible marks of their encounter with the New York selection, which swung its mighty battering-ram last Sunday against the champions' offense to grind the Irish visitors in the dust.

ODDS ON WINNER 100 TO 6; ORWELL, FAVORITE, FAILS TO PLACE

Epsom Downs, England, June 1 (AP)—April the Fifth, given only an outside chance to win, today outclassed 21 of England's best three-year-lods, winning the 153rd running of the Derby.

As April the Fifth, carrying the silks of T. Walls, flashed across the line three-quarters of a length in front of the Aga Khan's Dastur, W. M. G. Singer's Orwell, the choice at 15 to 8, finished far back in the field.

Lord Roseberry's Miracle, second choice at 100 to 9, was third, a head back of Dastur.

Although rated by many as a money horse, April the Fifth was considered to have no better than a 100 to 6 chance to defeat Orwell, winner of the two thousand guineas and champion juvenile of the English turf last year.

Dastur was a rank outsider at 18 to 1.

The victory of April the Fifth, owned by Tom Walls, movie star, traine rand all-around sportsman, came as a complete surprise to the estimated crowd of one million, including the King and Queen and other members of the royal family.

Experts Predicted Orwell Would Not Stand Up

The result showe dwhat many turf experts had predicted—that Orwell would not stand up under the gruelling test over the one and one-half miles.

April the Fifth, sired by Craig an Eran, out of Soud Again, traveled the up-and-down-hill journey in 2 minutes and 43 seconds.

The Aga Khan, Indian potentate, just missed winning his second Derby in three years, when Dastur failed to overhaul the fast-traveling April the Fifth in the stretch. Blenheim won for the Aga Khan in 1930.

E. Esmond's Royal Dancer, the only member of the Derby field to win a race over the Downs course this season previous to today, was fourth, beating out the Aga Khan's other entry, Firdaussi.

Orwell, famed for his early speed, was well up among the leaders for the first part of the difficult journey, but weakened when the real test came.

Walls, who recently returned from the South seas, said he was considering changing the name of the winner from April the Fifth to "June the First."

Largest Crowd in History Sees Turf Classic

The crowd, said to be one of the largest in the long history of the blue ribbon turf classic, was favored by the weather. There were sporadic showers, but they failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the multitude, which packed the huge grandstand and jammed every available standing space on the Downs.

Walls was given a tremendous ovation as he led his colt into the winner's circle.

The only other time Orwell was defeated was in his first race as a two-year-old last year.

From an excellent start, Sockpen jumped into the lead, closely followed by April the Fifth and Bacchus, with Miracle and Orwell not far off the pace.

Lord Derby's Entry Leads at Half

At the half-way mark, Lord Derby's Portfolio took command, with Firdaussi, Cockpen, Miracle and Orwell within striking distance. When the field reached Tattenham Corner, the critical point in the race, Portfolio was still out in front.

A quarter of a mile from the finish line, Dastur bounded to the front, setting a fast pace. April the Fifth was running strongly on the outside, however, and in the last hundred yards caught the Aga Khan's color bearer and won going away. Dastur just managed to stave off the mad rush of Miracle.

Orwell gradually dropped behind in the stretch run, finishing ninth. Victor Emanuel's Totaig and Richard Croker's Celebrator and Corcy, the American-owned horses, were far behind.

Eagle Nine Meets Providence Friday

Boston College will attempt to take the second game of its series with Providence College Friars, which will be played at Providence Friday afternoon. The Eagles dropped the first contest at the Heights in the last of the ninth after leading throughout the entire game.

Either Eddie Gallagher or Buddy Roy will be on the mound for the Eagles. It is Gallagher's turn to pitch, but Coach Frank McCrehan may decide to save him for the Alumni day game with Holy Cross next Monday. Roy hurled against the Crusaders at Worcester on Monday, but three days' rest is sufficient for the big fastballer.

Caddies Plead for 'Mere Existence' Fee

Kansas City, June 1 (AP)—For caddying 18 holes at local golf clubs the fee will be 75 cents, the Kansas City Golfers' Association has ruled.

Caddies have been on strike, demanding a return of the $1 fee. To settle the argument, the association called a meeting last night, at which both sides were heard.

A half-dozen caddies presented their case. John Workman, 17, summed it up in these words:

"Gentlemen, we're pleading for a mere existence, while you're pleading for pleasure."

Warriors of two different battles shook hands when Max Schmeling, world's heavyweight champion, greeted Governor Roosevelt, of New York, at Maxie's training camp at Kingston, N. Y. Roosevelt has a battle on his hands winning the Democratic nomination for President. Maxie must defend his title battling Jack Sharkey, of Boston, on June 16. (International News photo.)

The hard campaigns of the tennis court have failed to slow down Queen Helen. The world's single champion is pictured above sending back an overhead drive from the Mlles. Gallay and Marre team. Mrs. Helen Willis Moody teamed up with her veteran doubles partner, Miss Elizabeth Ryan, who hails from California but plays most of her tennis on foreign courts. Mrs. Moody and Sidney Wood were eliminated in the mixed doubles play. (International News photo.)

Fritz Knothe, Braves third sacker, thought it about time the Braves emerged from the losing streak for the former Seattle lad led the attack on the Giants, hitting a home run with two mates on the hassocks. The above photo shows the new member touching home plate while Francis Hogan, Somerville boy and Giants catcher, looks on disgustedly. Knothe was responsible for five runs.

New uses were found for Old Glory at Saunton Sands, England, where the American women golfers of this here United States played in the British open championship. The flag was used to mark the spot of the Yankee player ball. In this instance it solved the problem for Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare. Mrs. Vare was put out of the tourney by Enid Wilson, 4 and 2. Gov. Roosevelt Visits Camp of Forgotten Man

By BILL CORUM

Kingston, N. Y., June 1—Governor Franklin Roosevelt, an indefatigable seeker, finally caught up with "The Forgotten Man" at Kingston, N. Y., and who should it turn out to be but Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion of the world.

The governor's visit to his training camp was a won erful break for Schmeling, who has been listed among the missing practically ever since he won the title from Jack Sharkey. Now, in order to square accounts, Jimmy Johnston should go out and locate Justice Crater.

There was a rumor around Schmeling's camp that the governor was coming there to try and induce Mushky Jackson to accept the nomination for Vice-President in case it is tendered to him in Chicago next month.

Mushky, in a receptive mood, had a hair cut and put on his Sunday suit—the one with the lavender and old rose checks—but nothing was said. Probably with the unemployment situation as it is they won't have so much trouble finding somebody to run for Vice-President this year.

Schmeling presented the governor with an autographed set of boxing gloves and warned him to keep his guard high at Chicago.

"That was Tunney's mistake, you know," advised Max. "He got too confident and forgot to duck."

The governor said boxing must be a wonderfully healthy sport to turn out such physical specimens as Herr Schmeling. But he hasn't seen anything yet. Wait until he gets a look at King Solomon Rocky Stone and Mushy Callahan doing their version of the fighter's dance.

These young men are sometimes referred to as the Three Graces, so light and airy are they on their dogs.

One of Schmeling's camp followers, who frankly admitted that he had fallen a trifle behind in his reading since quitting the fifth grade, must have confused the names Franklin Roosevelt and Benjamin Franklin because he whispered to inquire: "Ain't that the man that invented the lightning rod?"

MRS. MOODY IS STEP NEARER FRENCH TITLE

Auteuil, France, June 1 (AP)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, seeking her fourth French singles title, today defeated Mlle. Collette Payot of Switzerland, 6—2, 7—5, in a quarter-final match of the French tennis championships.

Mrs. Wills won the French title in 1928, 1929 and 1930, but did not defend last year.

She will play Hilda Krahwinkel, German finalist at Wimbledon last year, in the semi-finals. Fraulein Krahwinkel today defeated Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall, the fine English player, in the quarter-finals, 6—3, 6—3.

Betty Nuthall, English star, defeated Josane Sigart, of France, 6—4, 6—2 in the third round of women's singles.

HARVARD PLAYS R. I. TEAM

The undefeated Rhode Island State baseball nine will furnish the opposition for Harvard this afternoon at Soldiers Field. The Nutmeg State team has chalked up 10 victories to date and has yet to taste defeat.

Because of the brilliant record of the invaders Coach Fred Mitchell of Harvard may be forced to call on his mound ace, Charlie Devens, though the Crimson mentor was saving his big trump card for the game with Holy Cross on Saturday.

Coach Frank W. Keaney intends to pitch Michael Martynick, who, as a sophomore, a year ago, fanned six Harvard batters and allowed eight hits in a game Harvard won, 9 to 3.

MR. BOSTON

—By JACK CONWAY—

SPEAKING OF champions, I'm going to ask you to doff your new straw lid to Henri DeGlane. Just because the Frenchman has told me he is ready to meet any man in the world.

Mr. Boston

I found DeGlane training for his finish bout with Jim Browning which takes place at a Paul Bowser show at the Arena tomorrow night. I once used to think DeGlane was afraid of Browning, but he convinced me in their last match that he doesn't know the meaning of the word fear.

When DeGlane finished tossing a flock of spar mates around, he told me he has been after Paul Bowser to match him with Jim Londos. Bowser has DeGlane signed to wrestle under his promotion in this city.

DeGlane believes he can lick Londos just as easily as the next fellow. He told me that he considers Browning a much better wrestler than Londos. In fact, the champion believes the big fellow from old Missouri is the outstanding challenger of the lot.

DeGlane has already beaten Strangler Lewis, who has been trying to kid folks into believing he is some sort of a champion. Henri also told me that if "Gentleman" Jack Washburn is serious in his statement that he is a champ of something or other that he is willing to give him a bout.

I have met a lot of pro title holders in my day, but I never met one who had as much faith in his own ability as DeGlane. More important he is willing to drive home his argument in bouts under fire.

Of course Jim Browning will tell you that after tomorrow night DeGlane will merely be an ex-champion. It is a free country and it isn't an offense to say you're going to win a wrestling bout. So let Browning have his say. At that he is one of the few birds around who has a c[illegible] of licking DeGlane.

PAUL BOWSER apparently believes in backing up his title attractions. He has Nick Lutze and Al Morelli in a 30-minute semi-final. Then Charley Strack will step along with Axel Anderson, while Joe Malcewicz will take on Karol Zbyszko.

Mack Adds Another Bout to His List

JUST TO MAKE sure of knocking Old Man Depression out of the boxing game, Eddie Mack, of the Argonne front, has added another 10-round bout to his show, which takes place at the Arena on next Monday night. He's signed up In Nyholm, of Maynard, and Ad Zachrow, of Dover, N. H., for a 10-round affair.

George Nichols, of Buffalo, National Boxing Association choice for the light heavyweight title, and Joe Knight of this city (he's given old Georgia the air) will feature the show.

Henry Firpo of Louisville will bat out right-handers against Rudy Marshall of Cos Cob, Ct., while Jack Renault of Cambridge will oppose George Salvatore of Oak Bluffs.

Boxing shows have only been drawing pretzels here. Mack says that if his card next week doesn't pull out the fans that he'll go in for aviation or what not.

JUST WROTE Frank Smith that I'll be on the job for the testimonial dinner the gang is going to toss to Paul Bowser at the Statler on June 11. Bowser has been giving dinners to about everybody in the world, not to mention staging a million or so charity shows. Glad to hear that folks are now going to do something big for Paul.

YOUNG STRIBLING sails for Australia from Los Angeles today. He will engage in six or eight bouts while in the Antipodes.

POLO PONIES TO RACE AT E. H. C. MEETING

Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., president of the Eastern Horse Club, announces that two races for polo ponies will be added to the program of racing at The Country Club, Brookline, June 15 and 17. The added events will bring the program up to seven races each day instead of the usual six.

Polo ponies have not raced in Brookline for many years, and it is an indication of the growth in interest in this game that the Eastern Horse Club is reviving this for mof sport. At least five ponies will go to the post in each event, according to Tuckerman, who rode a winner in a polo pony race at Clyde Park back in 1908.

The entries for the five stake races on the program to be raced at Brookline and at Raceland, John R. Macomber's private course at Framingham Centre, June 18, close today. Close to 100 nominations have been made for these five races alone.

Entries for the purse events on the program do not close until June 3, and a record-breaking entry is expected for this year's races. There will be seven races each day at Brookline and five, with a possibility of six, at Framingham.

Last American Beaten in British Title Golf

Saunton, England, June 1 (AP)—Mrs. Leona Cheney, last surviving American in the British women's golf championship, was eliminated in the semifinal round today by Enid Wilson, defending title-holder.

Miss Purvis-Russell-Montgomery defeated Mrs. H. Clarke of Ireland in the other semi-final, 3 and 2, and will play Miss Wilson tomorrow in the 36-hole final.

Mrs. Cheney fought bravely in what proved to be the best match of the tournament so far, but never could quite match the strokes of the tall English girl.

Miss Wilson, a powerful player with the wooden clubs, crushed Mrs. Cheney on the long finishing holes, where the American woman had trouble with her brassie.

Playing close to par all the way Miss Wilson delivered the final blow with a tremendous wood short to the edge of the 16th green while Mrs. Cheney was topping a brassie shot. It was simple then for the British girl to chip up close and sink a six foot putt for the hole and the match.

It was a gallant campaign for a title no American ever has won and Mrs. Cheney received congratulations from British as well as American onlookers in the galleries for her courageous stand against a woman who must be counted with the great of English golf.

Cards for the first nine holes:

Miss Wilson .....3 4 4 5 4 4 4 5 5—38

Cards for the last seven holes:

The Daily Dozen

—By Myles T. McSweeney—

All the reports on the Umpire Moriarty-White Sox are not in yet. Some of the victims don't know what happened until they read the papers.

But it seems that Moriarty thought he was in a baseball game, while members of the White Sox thought it was a soccer match.

Moriarty is credited with six hits so far.

The White Sox chalked up about nine free kicks.

Judge Landis may finally rule that it was no contest and have it played over again.

The fans didn't see it, anyway.

Milt Gaston added to the collection of famous last words when he said to Moriarty: "If you intend to lick the entire White Sox team, you might as well start with me."

Moriarty did. And when Milt awoke he wondered why no red flags warned him of that dynamite blast.

Unofficial scorers credit Moriarty with a couple of errors, however. After he hit Gaston, he picked on Grube and Berry, a pair of former all-America gridmen.

Moriarty, forgetting the new grid rule, didn't think he was stopped when he was down.

He still wanted to carry on, but the hand of fate . . . or was it the feet of the White Sox . . . were against him.

Give Moriarty credit, though, for trying to prove that umpires, like people, have a right to live.

Hadassah to Stage Mat and Ring Show

The Boston Chapter of the Hadassah will stage a combined wrestling and boxing show at the Wilbur Theater tonight. Many of the leading wrestlers will compete.

LACROSSE AT FENWAY PARK TOMORROW

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Although it has been kept something of a secret the opening game of the International Box Lacrosse League will be played here at Fenway Park, tomorrow night.

It will be between the Boston Shamrocks—glad to meet you, Mr. Shamrock—and the New York Giants. Since any news and information on the game has been withheld until the 12th hour, there isn't likely to be any tremendous turnout, but Coach Eddie Powers of the Bruin Cubs, who also manages the Toronto team in this new lacrosse league, writes us the game is sure to catch on here, and eventually will go big in Boston.

The Boston Shamrocks are managed by Al Neis, who has coached the Princeton lacrosse team for many years. The owners are Irving B. Lydecker, Raymond A. Ruge and Bernard A. Ruge.

Lydecker, now a New York lawyer, will be recalled as a member of the undefeated Syracuse champions of 1921 and 1922 and Harvard lacrosse coach in 1925 and 1926. Raymond Ruge played lacrosse for Princeton in 1928-19, and now is a New York architect. Bernard Ruge, a civil engineer, played and coached lacrosse at C. C. N. Y. Lydecker is president, and the Ruge brothers vice-president and secretary-treasurer of the Boston club.

U. S. Olympic Players on Boston Team

Several former U. S. Olympic players are among the Boston players, including Bill Logan, Jerry Maloney and Tom Biddison, all ex John Hopkins players. Paul Macesey of Lynn, the Brown football captain, also is a member of the Shamrocks. Other local players include Johnny Carlson and Henry Anderson, Gwynn of Penn State, Ralph Singer, the former C. C. N. Y. captain, and Harry Benson of Western Maryland. Four Caughnawaga Indians from Canada, Tom Jacobs, Jimmy Alfred, Johnny Diabo and Norman Saylor, are fighting for a berth on the Shamrocks. The star may be Tom Jacobs, who in Canada is called "The Top" because of his fast spinning play.

Included in the N. Y. lineup, tomorrow will be Fred Lowery who played hockey with the New Haven Bears and the Montreal Maroons, Jerry Lowery of the Chicago Black Hawks, Jimmy O'Regan of the Toronto Maple Leafs, Leon Miller, the Carlisle Indian; Frank Jacobs, the Caughnawaga Indian, Long Soo Oakes, the St. Regis Indian and Buffalo Pierce, from Tom Longboat's Onondagans.

Other Giant players are Harry Levy of Syracuse, Red Flannery of Baltimore, Rube Schwartz of C. C. N. Y., Stew Morgan of Vancouver, Larry Shay of Quebec, Tommy Westwick of Ottawa and Mark Seastrom of the Brooklyn Crescents. The team is managed by Jack Fillman, the former Yale coach, who is hockey announcer in Madison Square Garden.

Tomorrow's opening game will be called at 8:15 o'clock.

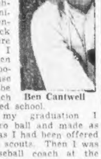
How I Got My Start In Baseball

By BEN CANTWELL

(Braves Pitcher)

AS TOLD TO JOE CASHMAN

After turning down offers for three years, I finally consented to play pro ball because I needed the money. I intended to stay only one season, but once in, I was virtually forced to remain.



Ben Cantwell

While pitching for the University of Tennessee, a flock of scouts were on my trail. I wouldn't listen to their propositions because I planned to be a teacher-coach when I finished school.

Following my graduation I played semi-pro ball and made as much money as I had been offered by any of the scouts. Then I was appointed baseball coach at the University of Tennessee.

The next summer, however, prosperity had deserted the semi-pro ranks and I agreed to twirl for the Knoxville club in the old Sally League on the condition that I would be given my release at the close of the season.

The next year I signed with Jackson, Tenn., on the same condition. When that campaign ended, however, I was in Sanford, Fla., and was drafted along with Al Lopez, Brooklyn catcher, by Jacksonville. If I hadn't been claimed I would probably have been given my release, but Sanford couldn't afford to turn down the draft price to satisfy me.

I could have quit the game, of course, but I didn't want to do that. So I accepted the Jacksonville berth.

The Giants purchased me from Jacksonville and I joined the Braves in a trade.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

After the Board of Governors had voted to increase his salary and he had been told not to consider any other offer, Dan Horan the former Mass. state handicapper was dropped from his position as club treasurer of the Portland Country Club.

Phil Keith, who has been treasurer of the Portland C. C. for years applied to the Board of Governors to act as general manager of the club. Keith replaced Bill Hammond, who has been the club steward for 19 years and then let out Alex Chisholm the professional who had been there for the same length of time.

About the middle of January, Dan Horan received notice that Portland was curtailing expenses and he was out. It was a tough blow to Dan for a year ago he turned down offers from Woodland and Pine Brook Valley to fulfill a promise to the Portland club.

Dan Horan is open for a position in Massachusetts and if any club is in need of a club secretary or manager, it has an opportunity to engage one of the best authorities on golf in this country.

There are many clubs who would profit in hiring Horan, for he is thoroughly posted in every department of the game, from operating a clubhouse to caddy master.

The odds are on Bert Nicoll and George McLeod to qualify next Monday at Belmont Spring for the United States open championship.

The W. G. A. is holding its annual four-ball tournament today at the Salem Country Club. This event is one of the most popular on the W. G. A. schedule and a large field is contesting for the gross and net trophies.

Practically all of the best four-ball combinations will be in action today or tomorrow during the annual Woodland open. Francis Ouimet, the national amateur champion, and Jesse P. Guilford former United States titleholder, have starting times reversed.

On Memorial Day, for the past six years, Bill Warnick and Ed Gabriel have played a four-ball match against Bob Woodsum and Harry Knight at the South Shore Country Club. Every match has gone to the home green and has been won by not more than a one-hole margin. This year, they were all even and will play off on July 1.

The Belmont Spring Country Club will attract an army of golfers on Friday and Saturday for the annual open handicap medal play tournament.

Miss Dorothy Hunter and Newt Hyslop, Albemarle, are not expected to encounter any too much trouble defending the club pair mixed foursome championship this week at the Dedham Country and Polo Club.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Down Memory Lane!

(With Edmund Lowe of the Cinemas)

Of the specie homo, known as the Native Son, I was born at San Jose, California, March 3, 1894.

I was almost nine years old when my father, who was a practicing attorney in the U. S. courts in San Francisco, decided it was about time the education of his latest offspring should start and I was packed off to public school.

Edmund Lowe

Graduating from high school I entered Santa Clara University. It was in my callow freshman days that I decided to become an actor. I decided then and there that the drama sadly needed uplifting and I was convinced that I was going to be the medium through which the elevation of the stage was going to be accomplished.

In my second year at college I took a special course in Shakespeare and joined the Dramatic Society. It was not long before I was playing Macbeth Shylock and Hamlet. Parents and friends of the students for miles around used to attend these dramatic entertainments and the critics from the local papers never failed to be on hand. These were always gala nights.

At the last performance of our college theatrical season, the society decided to do "The Bells" and I had the part of Mathias. According to the local critics we put it across like a lot of professionals. Even the San Francisco papers gave us fine notices. One over-enthusiastic newspaperman after the performance assured me in all seriousness that I had given a better portrayal of Mathias than Sir Henry Irving, when he had seen the great English actor in the part some years previously in San Francisco. And strange as it may seem, I believed him—and here I am.

I made two records at college of which I am justly proud. I graduated at the age of 18 with a Bachelor of Arts sheepskin and was the youngest to receive that distinction. Then followed a post graduate course and an M. A. degree. I was a member of the faculty for some time, but soon resigned, with a determination to seek employment on the stage.

The only person I took into my confidence was a kindly old gentleman, Father Fox of Santa Clara, and through him I managed to get a letter of introduction to Fred J. Butler, stage manager of the popular Alcazar Theater Stock Company in San Francisco. When I arrived there with my letter, the company was rehearsing. Through the dim lights of the house I could make out Evelyn Vaughn, Bert Lytell, Bert Wesner and Richard Bennett going about "business." Suddenly the boldness of my plan began to frighten me. If Bert Lytell hadn't spotted me standing there and asked me what I wanted, I am afraid I would have bolted. I stammered something about wanting to see Mr. Butler and Bert very kindly escorted me personally to Butler's office. I never forgot that. I never shall.

Butler, who was stage director as well as manager, received me with far more tolerance than I deserved. He nearly bowled me over by asking me if I cared to go to work immediately.

I hadn't counted on that. The truth was, I was very much in love with a girl I had met at college. I was visiting her folks and we wanted another week together, before I finally plunged into my career. Very seriously I put this proposition up to Butler and told him I I would prefer to postpone by debut a week if possible. "Sure" he laughed, "don't let your work interfere with a vacation and romance. We'll see you when you have more time." There, my goose was cooked. I had muffed my first opportunity and made myself a chump in my first interview encounter. What I took to be Butler's sarcasm just about sounded my death knell at that moment. At the end of a week, however, I summed up courage enough to return and found Butler most friendly and still sympathetic. He had not meant any sarcasm in his remarks.

"My first engagement at the Alcazar was a one-line speaking part. I never played "extras"—that is, I believe my one-line part removed me from the class of spear-carriers, and I was a full-fledged actor from the start. The thing to do, I figured, was to make my presence felt from the very moment of my appearance. The result was I almost wrecked the show, which was not a comedy. My character was a gamekeeper and my business was to stand concealed behind a clump of bushes and overhear a clandestine meeting between my former employer and another man's wife. Long before I was supposed to be seen on the stage, I had parted the bushes and was leering out upon the scene, with the last leer in me. Boy, how I characterized!

In time I became leading man at the Alcazar and among many other plays did "Damaged Goods." It was with this production that I started on the road. That sensational drama brought me to Los Angeles and an engagement at the famous old Burbank Theater, the pride of the town at that time, now a burlesque house.

When the new Morosco Theater opened in Los Angeles, I appeared in "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and many other stock productions, included in which were "The Outcast," in which I later played on the screen with Corinne Griffith. The movies were well under way out in Hollywood, but my real interest was centered on Broadway. My opportunity came following a nine-weeks' run with Maude Fulton in her greatest stage hit, "The Brat." After several mishaps in casting it was decided that I should open in my original part in New York.

Luckily "The Brat" was as much of a hit in the Big Town. While on the road with "The Brat" after our successful run in New York, we hit Los Angeles for the final performance, after a year in "the sticks." While there I was approached by Thomas Ince with a contract for a picture with Dorothy Dalton, "Vive La France." Ince offered me a five-year contract, but I did not accept it and returned to New York, after making the picture.

It was while I was playing in "The Walk-Off" that I formed the habit of dropping over to see the matinee performance of "The Follies." That was the year in which such beauties were in the cast as Marion Davies, Peggy Hopkins, Dolores, Yvonne Shelton, Dorothy Leets, Vera Maxwell and a stunning creature, whom I found to be, after consulting my program, Lilyan Tashman, who later became my wife.

After six years of success on Broadway in such plays as "Roads of Destiny," with Florence Reed, "The Son Daughter," with Lenore Ulric, "The Night Watch" and "The Walk-Off," I ran up against a snag—and had a flock of unsuccessful vehicles.

Then it was I turned again to pictures. I returned to Los Angeles on a contract and plunged into a year of program pictures always arriving just in the nick of time to save the heroine and generally behaving like a leading man. Among these pictures were "Kiss Barrier," "Port of Call," "Soul Mates" and "Siberia." It looked as if I were doomed to matinee idol parts. Then came my first character role, in "The Fool," and although critics were more than kind, it was a freak of chance that really gave me my break at colorful roughneck roles. Years before I had been starred in a picture, "The Brass Bowl," and just as a gag when a bit player did not show up, I resorted to my stage makeup technique and played the old, crazy detective in the supporting cast of my own starring picture. When my pleadings for the part of Sergt. Quirt proved vain, two years later, I dug out the old print and my performance of the detective won me the coveted role. But before "What Price Glory," another big event in my life took place, Lilyan Tashman and I were married. We have only played in four pictures together, but each one gave us some laughs. In "Happiness Ahead," the script demanded that I kick the vamp (Lilyan) out of my home. "Well," drawled Lilyan, "I didn't think you had it in you. Quite the cave man, aren't you?"

Among some of the other productions in which I have appeared are "Happy Days," "Born Reckless," "The Bad One," "Good Intentions," "Scotland Yard," Part Time Wife," "Don't Bet on Women," "Men on Call," "Women of All Nations," "Transatlantic," "The Spider" and "Cisco Kid."

NBC BROADCASTS POPS CONCERT

All U. S. Hears Popular Hub Feature

By N. F. T.

Tonight marks one more occasion when the entire U. S. hears from Boston by radio. Affiliated network stations of the National Broadcasting Co. are featuring the colorful Pops Concert, under Arthur Fiedler direction, originating at Symphony Hall, and on the air (WEEI) between 10 and 10:45.

These remarkable musical presentations enter into their 47th season hereabouts, reflecting an old European custom of combining symphonic music with sociability, as friends mingle and enjoy refreshment there on the floor of the big Huntington ave. auditorium.

* * *

PROGRAM PLANS

An especially appealing period is arranged. Mr. Fiedler, directing 85 selected musicians, will interpret compositions of Weber, McKinley, Strauss and Wagner. Arthur F. Edes of Station WEEI again does announcing duty and is planning to continue what is now an almost obsolete oddity of using his initials backwards, as in early radio days. He will tell everybody he is E. F. A.

* * *

What is so rare as a day in June—is that the saying? Well, a commercial sponsor in June now comes under that heading also.

* * *

This Seabury investigation of Walker winnings and what-not would surely make some hotsy-totsy listening. It very nearly went on the waves when Station WINS of New York made strenuous efforts to take hold. Mr. Hofstadter frowned, however, so a good time was missed by all.

* * *

GO-GETTER GIBBONS

Immediately following the Pops concert this evening (WEEI), the voice of Floyd Gibbons comes through again. Special arrangement by the National Security League brings Gibbons to the NBC network to deliver an address "Our National Defense."

* * *

New York broadcasters are busy making ready to fill air lanes with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" thrills and throbs. Executives at NBC headquarters announce this will take place June 13. Bloodhounds, ice on the river, Simon Legree, with the crack of his whip, screams of Eliza and soft music attending Little Eva's going aloft, are sound effects being carefully treated for realistic "mike" reproduction.

LOCAL LATHER

It took time and patience for the Jaysnoff (piano duo) Sisters to get a release from their Yankee Network Artists Bureau contract, but they are free agents now and headed for New York . . . Unless someone contradicts the "colyum" a claim is hereby staked for Boston as being first to boast a sound sanctum where a dressing room is built for a program star . . . Such happens tonight (WBZ) between 10 and 10:30 as Miss Fay Templeton appears on the "Gangsters Moll" offering there . . . Nary a word must be set down ag'in announcing prowess ever in evidence when John McNamara works . . . He's a top notcher and would have appeared to much better advantage on the Keith Theatre stage last Saturday night had he performed minus all that script . . . Somehow reading announcements with an audience looking on, is like poking a forefinger in some swell, newly blown soap bubble . . . True, it's an old studio custom, one radio might well abandon gradually, for the sake of showmanship . . . If a fine fellow with an equally fine voice (McNamara) will accept the kindly suggestion, his next personal appearance should be without continuity, providing his bosses approve . . . Imagine how unreal a play would seem if all the characters carried their parts on the stage and read them "at" each other . . . Highway Beauty, an asset of which New England is justly proud, will be interestingly discussed tonight (WAAB) at 8:45 by James P. Taylor, Vermont State Chamber of Commerce Secretary . . . Logic, grace and authority are apparent qualities of that Bainbridge Colby voice heard (WAAB) last night. More power to such men who know of what they speak, fearing not to SPEAK . . . Someday soon this typewriter will tap out a piece about struggling singers, musicians and story tellers encountered in local echo emporiums. These hopefuls get little if any money for much work, expressing almost unbelievable confidence that their big chance will come at any hour. Days have been many and long without realization of countless cherished dreams . . . Much grim determination and deep rooted faith will surely come to light.

VICTIM OF TAX GAME HAS PLAN TO AID NEEDY

This is the 28th in a series of articles exposing the tax collection racket, a form of legalized extortion which is fattening the pockets of constables and victimizing reputable citizens of Massachusetts.

John Buckley, 76, retired farmer of North Weymouth, who went to Dedham jail rather than pay an old age pension tax which, he claimed, he ought to be receiving the benefits of, has submitted a novel plan to the Tax Editor.

Buckley's relatives had to pay $17.85 before they got him out of jail. He wanted to serve the required seven days rather than pay such heavy penalty extras on an original bill of $3 for poll tax and old age pension.

BOND FOR CHILD

"An old age pension act," writes Buckley, "on the inclosed lines, would serve to make better citizens of the poor. From a New York Journal of 30 years ago, I learned that one-half the population of London, Eng., were buried at public expense. When they are not buried at public expense, it is at the expense of friends, which brings hardships and often distressing poverty.

"Readers of the Boston Evening American may be interested in the following plan:

"It is proposed that on the birth of a child, the town, county, state and national government each place a small sum, or bond, in trust for the child, the amount so deposited to bear interest from date of birth. Should the child die, a specified amount should be paid for its funeral expenses. Should it live to a marriageable age, the bonus from acrued interest would enable two contracting parties in marriage to start housekeeping free from debt.

PAY BURIAL COSTS

"Should the insured fail to marry, the trust would continue until death, when a specified sum be paid for funeral expenses, and the balance of the account be transferred to old age pension fund. The affair would be a purely paper transaction, as is any other bond, and there would be no charges against the fund until a death, and the interest from that and the other accounts would more than meet the charges. As with an estate in trust, the funds would become greater each year, and when the child reached old age it would not be a tax or burden upon the community.

"Plant a crop for the child and let old age harvest it."

Here is a complaint from Quincy:

"In 1929 (Dec. 1), I went with my mother to live in Norfolk Downs. We lived there till March 28, 1930, four months. We then went to live in New Hampshire.

CHARGED $1.45 EXTRA

"I had an old car worth about $25. My mother had one left by my father at his death, about the same value, the four months we lived in Quincy. In January, 1931, an excise tax bill for $2 came to us. As I am the only one working I intended to send the money as soon as I could. In three weeks time another bill came for $3.45. It really was the same bill for $2 which had leaped to that.

"I sent the money that I could not spare before it got larger. I thought that was the end of the excise tax for that year.

"Later I got work at Fore River, Weymouth. I boarded near my work in Quincy. Kept my one work car there. Worked from January to March, three months. This year, Jan. 1, I got an excise tax bill for $2 which was for three months.

"I was obliged to wait awhile, but was able to send same in February. The man who made the demand was Herbert B. Driscoll, 65 Adams st., Quincy. He said he was a constable and said if the tax was not paid at once he would sieze my property and if there was none he would 'jail' me. He told me to send the tax to his home address, but I did not, I sent money order to board of assessors, City Hall, Quincy.

PAYMENT RETURNED

"Before this, two days, he sent in a bill for $18.75. The $2 money order had been turned over to Driscoll and he returned it to me. As I was out of town, looking for work, my mother received it. He called at my home and it worried my mother, who is not well, when he told her he had come to take me to jail. She offered him the money order which he would not take. She then offered him the last $2 she had in the house. He would not take that. He said he had to have cash, the sum of $18.75 and he was going to get it.

"I know cars are taxed at this value. This one is not worth $25, one I fixed up myself for work. When I paid $2 to them for four months in Quincy I was paying altogether too much.

"I would like to go home to my mother who needs me but am I to be tormented to pay a bill I do not owe and at present cannot pay? I am not a tax-dodger. I am trying hard to make a living. Should I pay the $2 again? Kindly advise me. Do not use my name or address."

Another instalment in the Boston Evening American's investigation of the tax scandal will be published tomorrow.

On the Air

Out West radio b'dcasts of marriage ceremonies are becoming quite frequent.

The Federal Radio Commission should look into this. Using radio as a means to promote gambling is forbidden.

The An'ncer: "By special permission of the copyright owners, Mr. and Mrs. Soandso, their daughter will now join in the holy bond with Mr. Whoosis."

Stray Thought No. 29: The surest way for a sponsor to sell products on the air is to get up a p'gram with a cast of a few thousand, since artists always use their sponsor's goods. Rolls Royce, please copy, and remit advisory fee.

Radio exists in a cycle—and we don't mean a kilocycle. At the Chicago radio show last wk. the feature of the affair was a "back-to-the-battery-set" movement.

Joe Rines writes he's now the perfect an'ncer—a bit of larynx trouble has forced him into a temporary vocal silence.

"No man loses his freedom except through his own weakness, says Julia Sanderson. And hubby Frank Crumit retaliates with, "You, darling, are my weakness."

Ranny Weeks says he now understands how the word "barnstorming" originated. Such engagements, he says, usually take place in remodeled barns and rain usually ruins the attendance.

Stray Thought No. 30: Listening to some of the radio stars has given many an amateur singer a swelled head. And listening to some of the amateur singers has given many a radio star a headache.

COLBY APPEALS FOR JOBS

New York, June 1 (US)—Bainbridge Colby, former secretary of state, discussing unemployment in a national broadcast last night, declared the failure of the federal government to meet the problem it presented was threatening the collapse of public power in the United States.

Mr. Colby spoke from station KABC over the coast-to-coast facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System. He declared the nation confronted an emergency greater than that which existed during the World War.

He urged the passage of the $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan and the inauguration of a vast program of public works by Congress as one of the essential steps in national relief. He also advocated a sales tax.

In the course of his talk, Mr. Colby said:

"The paramount duty which rests upon us as a civilized nation is to provide shelter and sustenance for the unemployed.

"It is estimated that they number in excess of eight millions, not including other millions who have been reduced to privation and suffering by their inability to get more than part-time employment.

"These unfortunates are the victims of a faulty industrial and economic organization for which they are not responsible. The duty to go to their relief cannot wait upon a correction of the basic conditions of American life. There will be time for that later.

"The problem of the unemployed is tonight's shelter and tomorrow's food. We cannot wait until someone devises a plan for self-sustaining or self-liquidating relief.

"The duty to feed the hungry, to shelter the homeless cannot be postponed."

Honest, But Won't Talk

There's a bootblack on Newspaper Row who will vouch for the honesty of Jim Roosevelt, the Governor's son . . . Yes, young Roosevelt is oh-kay in that respect . . . He won't talk, though—that's the only thing that's a little bit vexatious . . . Jim had been coming in and getting his shoes made shimmery at this bootblack's stand for quite a while and the furbisher-up of foot leather didn't know him from Adam although he's probably taller . . . Then one day Jim reached into his pocket to pay him, and found he didn't have that well known wherewithal . . . "Is my credit good here?" he asked . . . The bootblack, a frank person, said, "Well, I don't know" . . . So Jim took out his card and handed it over . . . And then the bootblack's fears were set practically at rest . . . They were completely allayed when Jim came in next day and paid up . . . So Jim's all right about paying up . . . But he simply won't answer questions on politics, this bootblack finds . . . At least, his answers aren't what you'd call the real satisfying kind . . . "I don't know" and "I wouldn't say" are his most usual answers to queries on the political situation . . . So bootblacking for Jim isn't completely satisfying . . .

Dog-matic Assertion

To our collection of chuckles-from-readers, Jack Perlis of Roxbury adds this one—that it isn't the initial payment on a dog that is so expensive; it's the pupkeep.

Miracle-Man

And Phil Fine of Brookline tells, for our collection, of the two men standing on the proverbial street-corner, and one of them excitedly remarking that "there's a special extra out" . . . "Why, what happened?" asked the other . . . "A man got a job," replied street-cornerer the first . . .

Pick-Ups

That lovely singer of songs, Maxine Lewis, opened at the Frolics Club in Hollywood just recently, and is getting acquainted with her musical background-men (Irving Aronson's Commanders) one by one . . . But she nevertheless airmails to us the urging that we be nice to her boy-friend, Buster West, if we see him around this town . . . Here's a company which should weather any storm . . . A snooper sends its name in on a picture-postcard . . . It's located down in Connecticut, and it's called the Strong and Hale Lumber Company . . . Photoplay-actor George Stone, while here, told us that the reason why some stage actors haven't knocked the public over when they went talkie is because the screen shows its puppets in monstrously large size, and your face and general appearance has to register much more sincerity than is necessary on the speaking stage, where you're just your normal size, and not every single little facial expression and gesture shows up so . . . And we forget to ask him, "Well, then, and why do so many picture-people flop like flounders when they personally appear on the stage?" . . . The many admirers Grace Hayes acquired during her Cocoanut Grove and Shore Garden's engagements here will get some pleasurement when we tell them that she's now in vaudeville with two pianists on the stage accompanying her, and one of them is her 16-year-old son that she's so proud of — prouder than ever now, because his piano-ing and solo-singing in the act have set audiences by the ears . . . At the Palace, Grace-and-son were the outstanding audience-favorites according to cement-boiled New Yorkers who have written us . . .

Hot Stuff (?)

During one of our New York prowls, we were peasant-gaping at the sights along 42nd st. near the Amsterdam Theater and just had to snooper on a sidewalk crowd of men . . . Hanging unostentatiously on the outskirts we saw a sleek-pompadoured chap clad in a too-tight tweed suit . . . Frayed, dirty collar . . . Dirtier neck . . . He was manipulating a match-folder and a penny . . . A sleight-of-hand artist, we thought at first . . . Suddenly he said, "While I feel greatly complimented that the ladies should stop to listen to me, still I'm going to ask them to leave" . . . We were that nosey that we waited a distance away until the gentleman's activities had ended—then asked a man what had happened . . . He told us the frayed, dirty man had used the match-folder and penny just to collect a crowd . . . That accomplished, he pocketed these articles and drew forth several envelopes . . . These, he assurred his hearers, contained a "rare and rich" collection of "Parisian" photographs . . . While assuring, he glanced around as if in great fear of the cops . . . "Hustle," he told his crowd . . . "Buy quickly!" . . . Several obeyed, and bought quickly . . . They were warned not to look at the pictures on the street—again because of the cops . . . Then, as though perceiving one of the dreaded cops approaching, he fast-walked away from that place . . . The pictures? . . . Just two heavy, cheap cards—not even postals—with reproductions of model-girls well veiled . . . The funny part was that this Big Transaction occurred almost in front of Minsky's Burlesque House, the front of which is plastered with scores of photos much, much less conventional than the "rich and rare" ones the New York "suckers" had purchased . . . Scores and scores of them to gaze at—and for "no!" . . . Don't tell me New York's the biggest city in the world—it's the biggest VILLAGE, with the most yokels!

"U-Boat" Is Next for Colman

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service.

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, June 1—Much has been said about Sidney Howard and his sudden flight to New York. But nothing was mentioned, however, about the story, "U-Boat," an original which he wrote for Ronald Colman before he and Samuel Goldwyn had discussions on "The Way of a Lancer."

"U-Boat" has been purchased by Mr. Goldwyn and will be Ronald Colman's next story, following "Cynara." Sidney Howard co-authored this tale with Nevin Busch, and it's said to be a Colman story that is giving Ronald just what he needs in the way of thrills, adventure and action.

I have often wondered why those stories Charlie Ray made famous, the tales in which he played a shy, gauche farm boy, have never been reproduced on the screen. I suppose because there was never any one to take Charlie's place with the same facility for presenting wistful characterizations. Charles R. Rogers has signed Junior Durkin for a series of pictures.

Chicago Angle

Chicago always enters into the movie picture in one way or another. Harry Goetz and Edward Small have a rather interesting idea. They are bringing back the old Reliance Pictures and in a way that seems to me exceedingly interesting. They will produce a picture on a Reliance program called "If Christ Came to Chicago."

Marlene Looks Lovely

I know now that Marlene Dietrich's bizarre clothes have nothing to do with her charm on the screen. I saw her play a scene in "Blonde Venus" and she wore an old gingham dress and looked lovely. She was bathing Dickie Moore and didn't have to pretend the maternal look. It came natural. Herbert Marshall had only a few lines to speak in that one scene, but his personality and his diction are unmistakable.

At West Point

June at West Point has been featured in pictures, on the stage and in the movies, but so far never has a sound picture been taken at the academy, principally because the War Department hasn't been in favor of some of the stories submitted to them. We hear from an authentic source that Paramount has presented a story embodying the spirit of West Point which has met with the War Department's approval. Therefore, an entire company from Paramount will travel East during the graduation exercises in June at the Point.

Hollywood Chatter

Sylvia Sidney is speeding to New York. She has a holiday between pictures and she told some of her close friends that she expects to visit her mother who is in the East at this time. Little by little Clara Bow's excess avoirdupois is disappearing. A trained masseuse is on the ranch in Nevada and according to Sam Rork, Clara is working hard to co-operate. The first of August is set as the starting date for "Call Her Savage."

THEY'RE PEPPING THINGS UP AT ORPHEUM THIS WEEK

On the screen is "Huddle," featuring Ramon Novarro in one of his greatest screen roles. This film has plenty of action.

There Was a Time When Bernie Had to Wash His Own Socks

By BEN BERNIE
"The Old Maestro" Himself Now at RKO Keith's

Having reached an age where my only interests in life are music, golf, cigars, reminiscing about the "good old days when ——" gives me a real thrill.

Since the days when Joe Schenck, the movie magnate, then manager for the revered showman, Marcus Loew, happened into a store where I was demonstrating fiddles and offered me a 20-week booking at $25 per week, a lot of changes have taken place in ye old vaudeville world.

Ben Bernie

How well I remember that first vaudeville date on 14th st. in New York under his management at 17, when my youthful, slightly starved appearance and Paderewski haircut were all that saved me from being hissed off the stage for my classical efforts. Yessir, the old maestro went in for art and concertos in those days.

Not long afterward, after touring the back country in the Virginia hills, I teamed with an accordion player named Klass, and our combined paycheck went up to $70.

In those early years of bowler hats, pegged top pants, and five cent cigars, most of us old-timers lived in boarding houses while on the road, washed our own socks, and were lucky to have saved railroad fare back to Broadway, when the booking was over.

It was near here, in Springfield, with my old partner Klass that we stranded while playing the saloon circuit, and had to pass the hat to get within striking distance of New York.

Soon after that another accordion player crossed my path, and thus began the team of Bernie and Baker. Good old Phil. I wonder if he remembers our first transcontinental vaudeville tour, when we both sat up nights in day coaches making the jumps from town to town. Wondering how people slept on trains—neither of us up to that time having been introduced to the intricacies of Pullman berths.

I remember working with Baker on the same bill with Joe Cook, then a $60 a week comic, while Phil and I were already in the $100 class. Today Cook's salary rating is in the thousands. Bert Williams often headlining bills on which I was an "also ran," taught me how to sing and a lot about how to talk across the footlights.

Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Sophie Tucker, the Four Marx Brothers and countless other musical stars of the present day movie and musical comedy world, started the climb up the ladder on the old vaudevile circuits, mostly Keith's.

The 50th anniversary of Keith's activities marks, I believe, a return of the good old days in vaudeville. The RKO Keith's organization is bringing vaudeville back to its own!

Maybe I'm Wrong (About Hollywood)

—By JOHN P. MEDBURY—

Hollywood, June 1 — Martin Gang, Hollywood attorney, announces that business is getting better. A little extra girl has retained him to file an action against a gentleman friend of hers. It seems that he promised her a penny for her thoughts and now she has to sue him to collect it. If her attorney is successful in recovering the amount, she has agreed to give him 50 per cent of it.

Director: How old would you say that girl is?

Assistant: I don't know, but judging from the number of cigarettes she's been smoking, I'd say she was in her early nicotines.

Marie Dressler says she has discovered what's wrong with most of our modern girls. They have too many evening gowns and not enough aprons.

A traveling salesman died of heart failure on the train to San Francisco last week. He started to raise a Pullman window, and it opened.

Star Getting Acquainted With America During Her Vaudeville Tour

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Here's where the stage itself plays a new role! Conchita Montenegro is using it as the tourists use the rubberneck buses—for sightseeing! So for her the Fanchon & Marco bookings become a tour wherein the fetching senorita is getting a close-up of peoples and places.

* * *

La Maravilla is, you should know—and if not you are now so informed—a most interested, as well as a most interesting little lady. She thirsts for information, and doesn't mind asking questions. She'd make a good newspaper reporter. So she sees thoroughly and learns all about the cities she visits; and everywhere friends fill the trail, for this young woman of the species is gifted with a perfectly winning personality. Of the Spanish type, refined, well-educated, she is beautiful, and vivacity is her middle name.

Conchita Montenegro

Backstage at the Metropolitan, where she is adding glamour to the show this week, she rushes in, almost breathlessly from seeing Boston and meeting no end of folks. A glorious city, she declares—so different from the other American cities! People seem to live! Something of a Continental charm about Boston, she thinks.

"I love the Boston men!"

There now, you bashful fellows, step up and get acquainted!

"They're so kind, and so gallant," she continues. "People are so nice to me here. I love all your Yankee country that I have seen, and its Yankees, too."

* * *

Going back to pictures?

"Oh, yes, and soon," she answers.

Features?

"Yes," is the reply. But in Spanish, Spanish versions, you know. I have made many before. Later, more American pictures at Hollywood. I love the screen. My first love was the stage, and as a mere chit of a girl I went on the boards. As a dancer. They said I made good. So I became a professional. I toured all through Europe. Then they brought me to America to do pictures. I have been out from Hollywood six weeks, but in another five or six weeks, must be back there, to begin more work in the studios.

"This is a delightful tour for me, for it is my chance to travel and see America."

* * *

We make a mistake—here: Born in Argentina?

"Ah, but no," she comes back. "In Old Spain. In San Sebastian, in Northern Spain, up near the French border. Later we moved to Madrid where I was educated in a convent. My father was in the diplomatic service; by profession he is a civil engineer."

La senorita tells us her first contract was with M-G-M, her second with Fox. She appeared in a number of movies; who can forget her in "Never the Twain Shall Meet"? She is just as alluring in person. Truly, a delightful lass to meet—a girl of sheer fascination in personality. And utterly without affectation; wholesomely natural, and zestfully interested in everything about her.

Married?

There's hope, Boston eligibles—listen:

"No, no, no," she declares; "not even engaged."

HOOVER TURNS DOWN WET PROPOSAL

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service.)

Washington, June 1—President Hoover has definitely turned thumbs down on the proposal to write into the Republican platform a straight-out resubmission plank on prohibition, and is now inclined to stand for re-election on a simple law enforcement plank, similar to that of 1928, according to word privately circulated among the drys today.

PRESSURE ON HOOVER

Two weeks ago the re-submissionists were confident they had Mr. Hoover on their side and that he would accept a plank committing the party to a new test of the popularity of the 18th amendment. Such a plank was drawn up by Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and supported by other cabinet members and influential party figures.

Reports that the President had been won over, however, galvanized the drys into immediate action, and for the past 10 days there has been a steady pressure exerted on Mr. Hoover to "say it ain't true." This pressure has been directed through personal conference and in a deluge of warning letters and telegrams from drys throughout the country.

WHITE HOUSE SILENT

Twice during this period Senator Borah (R.) of Idaho has been called into consultation by Mr. Hoover, notwithstanding the coolness that has existed between them for many months. Borah is a consistent dry, and strongly opposes any temporizing with the prohibition problem in the party platform. It is understood the Idahoan is drafting a tentative plank at the President's request. The Borah plank will afford the wets scant comfort. Also, Postmaster-General Brown is re-drafting his plank in an effort to make it more to the liking of the drys.

From the White House itself there is nothing but silence on the whole prohibition question and how it is to be dealt with at Chicago. The callers who have discussed the subject with Mr. Hoover have been asked not to discuss the matter outside.

It is known, however, that the drys have urged Mr. Hoover to remain uncompromisingly dry, not only because of their own convictions in the matter, but also on the grounds of political expediency.

2 PARDONED BY GOV. ELY

Gov. Ely and the executive council today granted pardons under parole conditions to Howard Steward of Springfield and Peter Bejalian of Worcester and commuted the sentence of eLwis Abbruzzese of Lynn.

Steward was sentenced in 1911 to life imprisonment for the second degree murder of Thomas Donlin of Springfield. Bejalian was sentenced Oct. 0, 1930, to 2½ to 3½ years for burning a building in Marlboro.

Abbruzzese, on Jan. 22, 1930, was given three sentences of three to four years for larceny of an automobile and for having burglary tools and a revolver in his possession. Investigation disclosed that he was wrongfully accused, the governor finds. His sentence was commuted, making him eligible for release within a few days.

Lieut.-Gov. Youngman dissented from the council's action on Abbruzzese. The parole board also reported against his release.

MORTGAGE ROW SPLIT COUPLE

A $400 loan from his wife was compensated by giving her a diamond engagement ring which cost nearly a hundred dollars more, Jacob Newstadt of Dorchester, told Judge Dolan in probate court today, where his wife, Ethel, is seeking a divorce.

Their short marital life was happy, he said, except for his wife's insistence that his father pay off the mortgage on his drug store.

Newstadt, former instructor in the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and at present proprietor of a Brighton drug store, was married last Thanksgiving eve. They separated in January.

"On Christmas Day," he said, "when she brought my supper to the store we were both very happy, and then the talk about the mortgage began. After a while she fainted. I understand she is a high strung lady."

He denied he had ever pushed her out of bed o rstruck her.

E. Boston Dogcatcher Seizes 40, Scares One to Death

East Boston has the right kind of a dog catcher in Patrolman Joseph Schwamb. Not only has he caught nearly 40 dogs in the few days since he was appointed, but he climaxed his career today when he frightened an unlicensed mongrel to death.

Capt. Archibold Campbell started the drive late last week so that East Boston should not be overrun with stray dogs when the hot weather begins.

Today Schwamb was riding around the airport in an Animal Rescue League truck, when he spotted a large stray who has held at bay the forces of law and order since the drive began.

The good old hue and cry was roused and round the airport they went, helter-skelter, ducking tri-motors and mechanics. Then the animal made a break down Porter st. to Maverick st., turned up Chelsea st. and fell. Doctors pronounced him dead of fright.

HITS AT LYING WITNESSES

After Sivatore Bova, 30, of Staniford st., was held for the grand jury by Judge Murray today in municipal court, on a charge of armed assault, the court roundly scored five government witnesses for their testimony.

"I want to say to the witnesses for the government before they leave this court," said Judge Murray, "that I am sorry they didn't tell thetruth. I hope the government will find some people who love truth enough and whoh ave character enough to tell the truth when this matter goes before the grand jury."

The censure was brought when Henry Keernan, 33, of Chambers st., and Walter Ruhlin of N. Russell st., and three other witnesses had failed to identify Bova.

Sergt. Hugh Sullivan told the court that on the night of April 17 several shots were fired and, upon investigating, he found Keernan shot in several fingers and Ruhlin with two bullet holes in his coat.

Moratorium for Kreuger Co.

Stockholm, Sweden, June 1 (AP)—The cabinet today granted the Swedish Match Company, a Kreuger concern, a moratorium to the end of August. The company reported it was in a difficult position.

HENRY FORD ON SELF-HELP

My views of how people can best be helped are not new. The present period has only brought them into intensive application. Nearly twenty years ago when we established our minimum wage, which is now six dollars a day, we had the other side of the problem. It was then a problem of sudden prosperity. We tried to teach our employes how to handle their resources to the best advantage and how to evade the parasites which wait on every hand for the workers' wages. There was no criticism of our methods then; in fact, they were commended. They are the same methods now with such improvements as experience has suggested.

I said, in the first of this series, that being out of some one's employ need not mean being out of work. In the last analysis independence means self-dependence. Dependence on some one else for employment in busy times may too easily become dependence on some one else for support in slack times.

If it is right and proper to help people to become wise managers of their own affairs in good times, it cannot be wrong to pursue the same object in dull times. Independence through self-dependence is a method which must commend itself when understood.

Methods of self-help are numerous and great numbers of people have made the stimulating discovery that they need not depend on employers to find work for them—they can find work for themselves. I have more definitely in mind those who have not yet made that discovery, and I should like to express certain convictions I have tested.

The land! That is where our roots are. There is the basis of our physical life. The farther we get away from the land, the greater our insecurity. From the land comes everything that supports life, everything we use for the service of physical life. The land has not collapsed or shrunk in either extent or productivity. It is there waiting to honor all the labor we are willing to invest in it, and able to tide us across any dislocation of economic conditions.

Many people have found ways to self-help. Others have yet to learn how. The one wide-open, practical, certain unemployment insurance is the land. A family with its food assured is a family that can face the world. Both employed and unemployed men should invest their labor in the land this season. Hoarded labor is as harmful to the nation as hoarded cash. The family garden helps everybody and hurts none. It even helps the farmer by lifting the burden of public welfare taxes. Let every man and every family cultivate a plot of land this year, first for their own benefit, next for the benefit of trade, and for the benefit of the nation in general.

No unemployment insurance can be compared to an alliance between a man and a plot of land. With one foot in industry and another foot in the land, human society is firmly balanced against most economic uncertainties. With a job to supply him with cash, and a plot of land to guarantee him support, the individual is doubly secure. Stocks may fail, but seedtime and harvest do not fail.

I am not speaking of stop-gaps or temporary expedients. Let every man and every family at this season of the year cultivate a plot of land and raise a sufficient supply for themselves or others. Every city and village has vacant space whose use would be permitted. Groups of employed men could rent farms for small sums and operate them on the co-operative plan. Employed men, in groups of ten, twenty or fifty, could rent farms and operate them with several unemployed families. Or, they could engage a farmer with his farm to be their farmer this year, either as employe or on shares. There are farmers who would be glad to give a decent indigent family a corner of a field on which to live and provide against next winter. Industrial concerns everywhere would gladly make it possible for their men, employed and unemployed, to find and work the land. Public-spirited citizens and institutions would most willingly assist in these efforts at self-help.

I do not urge this solely or primarily on the ground of need. It is a definite step to the restoration of normal business activity. Families who adopt self-help have that amount of free money to use in the channels of trade. That in turn means a flow of goods, an increase in employment, a general benefit.

When I suggested this last year and enabled our own people to make the experiment, the critics said that it would mean competition with the farmer. If that were true it would constitute a serious defect in the plan. My interest in the success and prosperity of the farmer is attested by my whole business career.

The farmer is carrying in the form of heavy taxes the burden of families who cannot afford to buy his produce. Enabling them to raise their own food would not be taking a customer away from the farmer, but would be actually lifting a family off the tax-payer's back. It is argued that farm products are so cheap that it is better to buy than grow them. This would be impressive if every one had money to spend. Farm products are cheap because purchasing power is low. And the farmer paying taxes helps to pay the difference. The course I suggest is not competition with the farmer; it deprives him of no customer; it does not affect the big market crops. Gardens never hurt the farmer. Partnerships between groups of city men and individual farmers certainly help the farmer. When a family lifts itself off the welfare lists or increases its free cash by raising its food, it actually helps the farmer as it does every one else, including itself. In fact, it is fundamental that no one is hurt by self-help. In the relief of tax burdens and the revival of industry the farmer would share the benefit.

I do not wish to be too detailed in this suggestion. I know what we shall do in our own part of the country and with our own people. How this method is to be suited to conditions in all parts of the country must be determined. I am urging Branch Managers of the Ford Motor Company and Ford dealers everywhere to study this suggestion and find the best method of applying it to their communities.

It is not a question of selling land, or of rents. Those who have the land must offer it to those who will use it. We ourselves shall farm large tracts of land, not for profit, but in experimental search for new market outlets for the farmer. We are saying to our people: "Here is the land. How much can you use?" For several years we have been running large crops of everything from sunflowers to soy beans through our chemical laboratory, in an effort to find an annual market for the farmer's produce—but that is a story I shall have to postpone until Friday. I mention it now to show that even in these larger operations we are not entering into competition with the farmer. Our hope for agriculture is to make it the partner of industry.

Prepared and paid for by the Ford Motor Company as a contribution to public welfare.

THIS IS LIFE

POLITICS IS NEITHER ART NOR SCIENCE, BUT LITTLE OF EACH

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

THE PROFESSOR of Public Law at Columbia has been freeing his mind to the girls of Barnard on the subject of politics. Says he:

PROF. ROGERS

"Politics is not a science because none of the methods and measurements of a constant can be applied. Politics [illegible]

[illegible] a true science you can tell in advance what is going to happen. We may not know why but we do know how and how much. There is such a thing as the law of gravitation and we do know a good bit about the attraction of solid bodies. There is such a thing as Mendel's law and we do know a good deal about how heredity works. In both cases we know quantitatively, which is to say exactly, what is going to happen under certain conditions.

* * *

Human Equation Can't Be Figured

But whatever the human equation enters into the situation, where are we at? Economics is a social science, so called, but how are we to calculate what a banker will do in a given situation, or the banker's depositors if they get uneasy. We can guess whether the banker will make the loan or whether the depositors will start a run, and often we can make a good guess, but that is all. So with politics—with Congressmen, mayors, Presidents, and Senators, especially Senators. Mr. Coolidge said once that as vice-president he had tried to learn the rules of the Senate and had come to the conclusion that there is only one; the Senate does whatever it wishes whenever it wishes to do it.

Webster says: "Science is accumulated and accepted knowledge which has been formulated with reference to the discovery of general truths or the operation of general laws."

Somehow that does not sound like any politics I ever heard of. Certain individuals in politics may be called scientists, I suppose. Mr. Representative Beck is supposed to be something of an authority on the Constitution; Mr. Representative Luce is supposed to be something of an authority on parliamentary procedure. But they are rare birds in an organization of men, most of whom can hardly be called authorities on anything serious.

But when the Columbia gentleman talks about politics being an art, I have dubious recourse to Webster again.

"Art is skill, dexterity, or the power acquired by experience, skill or observation. Art is the general principles of any branch of learning or any developed craft. Art is the systematic application of knowledge or skill in effecting a desired result."

* * *

Perhaps Art as in Artifice

The further you read the funnier it gets!

"Art is the application of skill or taste to production according to aesthetic principles."

A study of the aesthetic principles of the present Congress would be interesting.

But, also Art is "cunning, artifice, craft." The man who wrote that definition was thinking of politics, I am sure. "Cunning, artifice, craft." Sounds reasonable!

Art is also "the black art, magic." But perhaps that is being a bit too harsh. Witchcraft and wizardry. Things done in the dark of the moon. Sowing the wind, reaping the whirlwind. The sorcerer's apprentices drowned in their own flood—of oratory.

No, any definition of Art I can find doesn't seem to me to set any standard that any politician I ever heard of has a chance of reaching. Particularly when you go a step further and try to combine the definitions. Jevons, that well of logic undefiled, says: "A science teaches us to know and an art to do . . . Science is systematized knowledge. Art is knowledge made efficient by skill."

Supposing you are congenitally able neither to know or to do! Or supposing, however capable you are individually, you are surrounded by and voted down by a crowd, all jerking at the end of a lot of strings held by assorted lobbyists. Supposing you are a man like David Walsh trying to make a reasonable plea for a piece of legislation, as he did Monday evening over the radio, knowing all the time that the gang has already voted down the proposition without hearing it!

* * *

Politics a Paying Proposition

I can imagine a deliberative body capable of acting in such a way as to make these definitions not altogether too ridiculous. The Senate of the Roman Republic, for instance. A group of elderly men of good families and long political traditions, all of them former high office holders, homogeneous in background, breeding, experience and ideals. The Senate of the United States previous to the Civil War (when it wasn't arguing slavery) possessed most of the above characteristics.

But the deliberative bodies of our blessed present seem to have few of the characteristics which go to make law-making either a science or an art. So we shall have to fall back on a more homely definition, one with which all can agree.

"Politics is an occupation which pays wages rather higher than the politician might normally expect from practicing his trade or profession (if any); it carries with it sundry toothsome and juicy pickings, such as expense accounts, trips and junkets, salaries for relatives and connections, the whole making a very nice total. The art of politics consists of getting elected and then of getting re-elected, if possible, indefinitely.

"The science of politics consists of knowing when to vote with the majority and when to jump the fence, of keeping the ear to the ground, of listening earnestly to lobbyists, the local boss at home, the Anti-Saloon League, and the American Legion, and obeying them abjectly when they crack the whip. If this involves disregarding the advice of financiers, economists, experienced publicists, and others who may be expected to know what they are talking about, so much the better."

The chief defence of our political system is that it really represents America and, therefore, should not be attacked. We are the first people in the world really to erect into political practice the theory that the blind should be led by the blind and to defend the practice on the ground that it is Democratic.

And they shall both fall into the ditch!

Soak Rich Tax Dodgers, Is Goodwin's Battle Slogan

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

The designation "soak the rich" is a misnomer and should be "soak the rich tax dodger," Frank A. Goodwin asserted today as he prepared to battle tomorrow at 10 a. m. before the House ways and means committee on his bill to tax securities now exempt.

As defeat of all special tax legislation now before the House was being predicted on Beacon Hill today, Goodwin was marshaling his forces in an attempt to bring success for his bill providing for a $20,000,000 bond issue to be met by a 6 per cent levy on tax exempt securities.

"My bill would soak the rich tax dodger," declared Goodwin. "The policy at the State House for years has been 'soak the poor,' and they have been soaked to death. Now the worm is beginning to turn.

"I hope the House will pass this bill and put the Senate on the spot. The Senate put the House on the spot on the salary reductions."

DOUBT EXPRESSED

Doubt was expressed today, however, as to the ability of Goodwin to put his bill over.

The real battle will come after the House ways and means committee has reported back on the Goodwin-Pratt measure. The report is almost sure to be unfavorable. And in any event the bill can hardly get the two-thirds vote later on which a bill calling for a bond issue must have. The roll call vote on accepting the bond amendment was 127 to 91 or 18 votes short of the two-thirds necessary on the enactment stage.

But before that test can be made the administration forces will be able to bring about a vote on the entire relief schedule originally favored by the committee on ways and means and taxation. That schedule calls for a total revenue of $9,500,000 through 10 per cent increases in income, corporation and public services taxes, an increase of $2 in the poll tax, an additional one cent tax on gasoline and reductions in salaries.

RELIEF PLAN OPPOSED

Present sentiment appears to be against this schedule. If this tax plan is definitely defeated or the Goodwin substitute fails to get the required two-thirds vote, the only measure then remaining will be the bill which proposes a two cent tax on every 15 cent package of cigarettes. Little enthusiasm for picking out this particular industry for a target appears to exist in the Legislature.

The "do-nothing" spirit of the Legislature is perhaps best illustrated by talk going on among the members as to whether the Governor will insist that they enact some program of relief prior to prorogation.

Of some 28 amendments voted on by the House, only one was accepted. This referred to the time limit on pay reductions.

A proposal to tax electric current was barely defeated on a roll call vote, 105 to 112. This amendment would have placed a tax of five tenths of a mill on each kilowatt hour.

FAELTON, 76, TO WED PUPIL, 34

A romance born of melody over the keyboard of a pianoforte will be climaxed in a few days by the marriage of Reinhold Faelten, 76-year-old head of the Faelten pianoforte school, and Miss Anne Hathaway Gulick, 34, formerly his pupil, of 59 Fayerweather st., Cambridge.

The pianoforte school head lost a wife and has been [illegible] while for Miss Gulick it will be a first marriage.

A mutual interest in music was the basis for the romance [illegible] back to the days when Miss Gulick was his pupil. Through his tuition she has risen rapidly to fame in the concert fields in America and Europe.

When Miss Gulick was only 14 she played in chamber music in Athens, Greece, and since then she has played with the Boston and other noted symphony orchestras.

She is the daughter of Prof. Charles Burton Gulick, Eliot professor of Greek at Harvard, and lives with her parents.

They were trailed to Montreal and there shot their way out of a police trap. Two passersby were wounded. The pair were captured a week later at gunpoint by Montreal officers.

Fitzgerald Breaks Down in Fighting Wife's Suit

Benedict Fitzgerald, supervisor of music in Cambridge public schools, broke down and wept on the witness stand today in Middlesex Probate Court while testifying against the suit of his wife for separate support.

The music supervisor's moment of weakness came when he was being questioned relative to his mother, who died recently, and whatever bequests she had left him.

He recovered quickly, however, to testify that he had been refused food at the table in his family's home on the occasion of his last visit, last Christmas Eve—and that he then had rummaged around in the garbage pail.

CITES FROM DIARY

Fitzgerald testified that all his mother left him was a bank book with deposits of $1054, out of which the funeral expenses had to be paid.

He said he kept a diary "of a great many things" and from it he was asked to refresh his memory on possible visits to his wife's apartments after he left home last Nov. 1 to live with his mother.

Q.—Well, did you make it a habit to inspect the garbage pail? A. No, not especially.

IN GARBAGE PAIL

Q.—Then why did you inspect the garbage pail? A. Well, I inspected it to see that there was no waste. It was my prerogative to see that everything was all right. I inspected the icebox, too. I provided the contents and so there[illegible] I inspected [illegible]

TRAFFIC OF CITY UNDER SURVEY

The most extensive survey of traffic conditions in the city's history will be made in Boston today with a 17-hour tally of all rail and water terminals and main arteries leading into the city.

Philip T. Desmond, superintendent of engineers of the Boston Traffic Commission, is in charge of the count and will be assisted by 65 engineers provided by the Emergency Planning and Research Bureau.

THIRD GIRL ATTACKED BY MALDEN PHANTOM BANDIT

VICTIM BEATEN BY A PROWLER IN HER ROOM

Scrambles Away When Struggles and Screams Arouse Family and Neighborhood

Malden was aroused today when a "boudoir bandit," for the third time in 10 days, invaded the bedroom of a girl, while she slept, and attempted to attack her.

Today's victim was Miss Elizabeth O. Lundin, 22, of Ferncroft way, Maplewood, who, after being awakened by blows on the head, struggled with the intruder and by her struggles and screams which aroused the neighborhood frightened him away.

Miss Lundin, who required medical attention after her experience, told police the intruder had awakened her by several blows on the forehead with his fist and had then attempted to attack her.

She struck him and when he seized her, struggled and screamed she said. He ran from the room and she gave chase. He fled down the hallway and, flinging open a window, jumped onto the roof of a veranda, from which he slid down to the ground and escaped.

The roof and window had been painted only yesterday and the intruder was stained by the fresh paint as he escaped. Police were combing the city today in search of a young man whose clothing was covered with the paint stains.

HOME-MADE LADDER USED

2ND ELY VETO OVERRIDDEN

For the second time in two days, the House overrode a veto by Gov. Ely—this time the fight presenting the curious spectacle of the Democratic floor leader, Leo M. Birmingham of Brighton, opposed to the governor.

The bill on which the vote to override was 162 to 29, was one allowing the city of Boston, with the approval of the city council to pay a claim of $29,937.63 to John E. Dyer, contractor, for alerations on the Charles st. jail.

The Governor, in his message pointed out that the claim had been before the courts which decided against Dyer.

Dyer, who subsequently went into bankruptcy over the job, claimed the $29,937.63 on the ground that the city of Boston made an error in calculations on the alterations contract.

ARMED BANDITS ROB STORE

Two armed bandits today held up the manager of a chain store at River and Sturbridge sts., Dorchester, backing him and a customer into a rear room and looting the cash register of $75.

In making their escape in an automobile, the holdup men fired a shot at John Caddy, 18, of 42 Sturbridge st., who was passing and started to pursue them.

The manager, L. I. Williams, was waiting on a customer in the store when the bandits appeared with guns leveled and ordered him to throw up his hands. He complied and with the customer, was ordered into a back room.

Youth's Suicide Hoax Echoes Unsolved Wife Murder

The unsolved murder of a Cambridge woman in Dedham six years ago echoed in California today with the arrest of a Dedham youth in a suicide hoax.

The clue was unearthed in a 30-page manuscript — "The Murder in Dedham," found near suicide notes that told of the death of William DeMazio of East Dedham.

WROTE OF MURDER

DeMazio was found in a crowd of spectators at Lake Merritt, Oakland, Cal., where police dragged for a body believed to be his.

Oakland police said he disclaimed authorship of the suicide notes, but admitted writing the manuscript on the murder and had appeared at the dragging for "local color" on "The Murder at Dedham."

Dedham police, learning of the manuscript, recalled the mystery murder of Mrs. Frances Kwiatkowski of Franklin st., Cambridge, whose battered body was found on March 19th on a lonely road near Metropolitan Park, Dedham.

So convinced were they that DeMazio had some knowledge of the mystery that Sergt. John Cahill wired police at Oakland for further information on the manuscript.

ONLY 14 AT TIME

Sergt. Cahill pointed out that DeMazio, who is now 20, would have been but 14 years old at the time of the murder but might have some knowledge that would help in its solution.

Mrs. Vincent DeMazio, mother of the youth, told police that her son left Dedham in April, 1931. He toured Maine and then went through many southern states with [illegible] she said, and [illegible] heard from through a Mother's Day card mailed in California.

According to the youth's mother, he read the newspaper accounts of the murder very carefully when he was a boy and appeared to be intrigued with all murder mystery stories. From the age of 12 she said, he had been intending to be a writer.

HOPED TO SELL STORY

Since a boy he has been writing assiduously and his parents believe his "Murder in Dedham" is but one of many manuscripts he has prepared, with the hope of some day selling them.

DeMazio's correct name is William [illegible] and he is a son by her first marriage, Mrs. DeMazio said. He assumed the surname of his stepfather shortly before he left Dedham.

The query to California brought from the files the only unsolved homicide on the records of the Dedham police.

Notables Attend Funeral of Hearn

State legislators and city officials attended funeral services today for Philip A. Hearn, 62, of 231 Webster st., East Boston, father of Representative William H. Hearn, a lifelong resident of East Boston.

A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated in the Church of the Assumption by the Rev. William J. Beaty, with the Rev. Stephen Murray as deacon and the Rev. John J. McMahon sub-deacon. Burial was in Holy Ghost Cemetery.

WE WILL CERTAINLY TAKE TO THE DEMON RUM if we have to spend another Tuesday like yesterday . . . ! Just 20 hours were spent getting this column together and we traveled from Wellesley to Cohasset to try and coax the dear girls to unhoard their news. Social chatter is almost as scarce as gold these days . . .

FRANCES McELWAIN

Speaking of the Demon Rum always makes us think of Mrs. William H. Brown, or Mrs. Prohibition Brown as her friends call her. She is one of the charter members of the W. C. T. U. and doesn't care who knows it . . . if light wines and beers ever become a fact, sweet Mrs. Brown will sit down and die of sheer disappointment . . .

* * *

As her Cohasset neighbors are preparing to do now that the news is out that Mrs. Brown has sold her beautiful estate at Hominy Point to the Catholics for a rest home for priests. Hominy Point is just opposite the William C. Coxs' new summer palace and is right in the heart of the smart South Shore colony . . .

The Browns have rented another house in Cohasset for the season and will have as their guest Mr. William Moors, brother to Mrs. Brown. The young Lewis Bells (Adelaide Brown) and the new baby are already in their new home nearer the village.

This is the college which is run on progressive lines, we are told, more applied arts and not so much of good old three R's.

Eloped

IT IS SO LONG SINCE WE have heard of an old-fashioned elopement, we thrilled at the news . . . at Wellesley we learned that the young son of the house of McDowell, Mrs. Corwin McDowell, of Pegan Hill, Dover, ran away with Ethel Fern Hare, pretty daughter of Mrs. Clifton Gordon Burnham, of Wellesley Hills, on Thursday last. Starting off for Providence, the young couple were unsuccessful in finding a preacher to marry them in that city, so they carried on to Connecticut. Where there was a will there was a way and when they turned toward home they were Mr. and Mrs.

* * *

AS THIS IS THE SECOND elopement in the McDowell family . . . the first occurring to the older son and terminating in the divorce courts . . . we hear that Mrs. McDowell frowns on the match which doesn't mean that the bride's mother is pleased either. But what do the young couple care . . . they left for Halifax on Saturday to the Land of Evangeline and apple blossoms. Happy Days!

WHERE THERE IS A MARRIAGE there is always a divorce in the social news . . . we learned in our travels that pretty Mrs. Amory Goddard (Evelyn Cole of Coca-Cola millions), whose residence was at 1 Otis pl. on Beacon Hill, has left for Reno to get rid of the ties that bind. Amory doesn't seem to enthuse much about the idea.

COMFORT IN LOVE

So they took what comfort [illegible] from their love and what happiness they could get from being together and said nothing. And when the wife of one of the managers of a neighboring company plantation decided that Bill was the only bright spot in a very dreary place, Nevis said nothing and bore it in silence, watching Bill flower into something of his old self under soft eyes and caressing ways and [illegible] flattery. It was the same, she thought wearily, the world over. You couldn't escape from [illegible] you couldn't escape from yourself. "What's the idea of playing the game with Linda Hayes? Looking for the engineering job over there?"

He said angrily:

Walter Mason is all right but either he doesn't give a damn about us or else he has less drag than I thought he had. Hayes is a good scout. And if you call being decently civil to his wife playing a game why, I suppose I am."

In the early spring of that year they moved bag and baggage to the other plantation on which Bill was made chief engineer at the princely [illegible] He's good. He's saved the Central company money. He told me some of the things he's done. Well we can afford to have a man like that on our payroll."

Daily True Story

The Jade Dragon

GEORGE HAYNES met Fan Toy in her father's antique [illegible] Chinatown. The smell of incense was heavy in the place, and George, walking between counters of plates and porcelain, [illegible] failed at first to see the diminutive [illegible]

The girl before him, in her garb of her ancestors, was almost flowerlike in beauty. She seemed [illegible]

"Can you tell me the price of [illegible]" he stammered.

[illegible]

"[illegible] necklace is $50," she told him. "Exquisite, is it not?"

BUYS NECKLACE

George bought the necklace. He also bought something for Cousin Susan—whom he hadn't [illegible] before he met the [illegible] of Fan Toy. And he pretended [illegible] a rare jade drag[illegible] his bank.

"Are you here all the time?" he [illegible]

"Oh, no," said the girl. "My father asked me to watch while [illegible] away on business. Usually I am at school. Are you, by any chance, an expert at trigonometry?"

[illegible] intrigued [illegible] with him. He did not call at her home—Fan Toy said that would cause gossip. He met her in a hotel lobby, and was almost bowled over when she approached in a stunning evening [illegible] with priceless stones around her throat and [illegible] cloak over her [illegible]

"[illegible] You like me in American [illegible]" she asked, and reading the answer in his eyes exclaimed: "I'm so glad!"

[illegible] evening had a [illegible] of [illegible] when he [illegible] George asked Fan Toy [illegible] home. He asked her to meet him again the following night, and Fan Toy [illegible] agreed.

George stopped the cab on the fringe of Chinatown and [illegible] driver carry Fan Toy on to her home alone.

Incense was in George's nostrils when consciousness came back to him. He thought of Fan Toy, but she was not there. An elderly Chinese was regarding him gravely.

"So you are the American for whom my daughter has violated the traditions of our house," the man repeated, in queerly inflected English. "I have been away and on my return I heard that which seemed to cast reflection on our honor.

"I had you and Fan Toy followed tonight and I ordered my agent to bring you here without fail. If wrong had been done, you should expiate with your blood. But"—and the man bowed gravely—"my daughter has convinced me a great error has been made."

A wave of his hand kept George silent.

GIVEN JADE DRAGON

"You will not see Fan Toy again," the father continued. "She and I are leaving tonight for the land of her ancestors. It was to arrange the sale of my shop that I have been away. No, you must not see Fan Toy. Your race is not her race, and only tragedy would come of it. Sleep, now, and your head will stop aching."

He [illegible] a pinch of powder on a brazier [illegible] George felt slumber claiming him.

George was in a taxi, riding uptown, when he next awakened. A poignant grief racked his heart. He would never find Fan Toy again.

But the [illegible] Chinese girl had said her farewell to him. A [illegible] of jade was in one of his pockets [illegible]

BOY'S NOT WORTH BREAKING HEART OVER, SAYS MISS FAIRFAX

He Seems Too Much 'Wanderer' to Be Constant to One Love, She Tells the Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Some months ago my work brought me in contact with a gentleman several years older than I am. I fell madly in love with him and we went around together a great deal and he seemed to care a lot about me although he never told me so. He likes to run around and have a good time while I am just the opposite type, content to spend my evenings at home.

PUZZLED.

Dear Puzzled—From what you tell me, it would seem that you are inclined to be serious and the man is not. He is careful not to commit himself and tell you he likes you. If you're going to let this affair gnaw your heart and really make you suffer, will it pay? If you're going to be unhappy, what is there in it for you with a man, who, from what you tell me, is a good deal of a wanderer?

Tragedy of the Depression

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Owing to business conditions my wife's youngest sister was without a job for nearly a year, and came to make her home with us. When I agreed I had no idea of the element she would bring into our family life. She is ten years younger than my wife, and has a sparkling personality. My wife has always imagined herself as ill, though the doctor assures me there is really nothing the matter with her but imagination. My sister-in-law and I were head over heels in love before we realized it. We both want to do the square thing, but what is to be done? She cannot get a job, and I cannot turn her out, as she has nowhere else to go, and the situation is becoming terrible. My wife and I have three children and love them devotedly.

A HUSBAND.

Dear Husband—This is an unhappy situation into which all of you seem to have walked with the best intentions in the world. You haven't said anything about your finances but would it be possible for you to advance the girl enough money to pay her board somewhere else for the time being? If not, why can she not pocket her pride and take a job as a mother's helper somewhere? There are enough girls to fill these jobs, particularly where the applicants are willing to go for board and lodging and a small wage.

A Desperate Chance

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a woman about 40 years old, but lately I have been having things done to my face and hair. Since I am rather slender, people imagine that I am about 26. I never married, and recently moved to a small town. I fell in love with a man about 21 years old and he asked me to marry him. I have kept my age a secret. I have told the man that I would give him my answer soon. I love him very dearly but I want your advice before taking any definite steps.

DOUBTFUL.

Dear Doubtful: While the secrets of a woman's toilet are nobody's business but her own, and it is greatly to your credit that you manage to look half your age; still when it comes to marrying a boy of 21 years there is much to be considered. Sometimes, when this tremendous disparity of years happens in a love affair, the older person decides to throw everything into the discard for a year or two of happiness. It's a desperate gamble. Are you willing to take it?

He Wants to Go "Steady"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years old and have been going out with a boy a year or two older, and now I've had a quarrel with him. He wants to go "steady," and says he doesn't want to go out with a girl who goes out with everyone. Since he has been going with me he doesn't even care about other dates. I'd go with him "steady" but my parents object to it.

M. L.

Dear M. L.: Don't worry! "It'll all come out in the wash," as the saying goes. Your parents think at eighteen you're too young to go "steady." Well, if you were my daughter I'd think so, too.

'SYMPATHY UNTOLD' :-: :-: Drawn by Nell Brinkley

IF UNSPOKEN SYMPATHY could help a sad young mother in Hopewell, N. J., her heart would find some ease. For the entire world of mothers, old and young, even beyond the borders of America, where shame, sorrow and indignation are in full possession of its people, think of her—night and day. With grief, understanding and sympathy.

Untold sympathy; for most of them, hundreds of thousands of them, would feel that a word, a written word, from them, would be an intrusion. The most terrible of all sorrows has fallen on her, and she would need and want only her OWN. The people she loves and who love her.

But scarcely a woman in the land smooths back the hair from her own child's face, kisses it good night, listens to its talk that does not feel pain, real and understanding, for this one other little mother, who must know that she will not see her baby again in this world. And most terrible, that someone without mercy murdered it!

They [illegible] what her [illegible]. They know exactly what her sorrow is. They know that time never made a mother forget her child's face, or dimmed it by one line of its bright face.

The silent mothers all over the world think of Anne Lindbergh.

They prayed for her baby's return safe. Even those who had not prayed for a span of years.

Now they pray for vengeance.

Tomato Bread Good for the Spring Tea

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WITH SIX lunch box sandwiches a daily problem, I'm always on the hunt for new ideas for both the bread itself and the filling. And the new tomato bread has truly been a blessing undisguised.

A member of our cooking school was the first woman I knew to work out this recipe, and it certainly makes deliciously moist, flavorful bread, and we know that it is as good for us as it is good to eat. And it's really easy to make.

First scald 2 cups of plain tomato juice. Melt in this 2 tbsps. of shortening, 1 tsp. salt and 3 tbsps. of sugar. When lukewarm, add one cake of yeast mixed with ½ cup of lukewarm water, and white bread flour to knead (about 7 cups). Use an earthen bowl and mix with a knife. Knead until elastic. Let rise in a temperature of about 75 deg. F. When doubled in bulk, shape into loaves and place in well-buttered bread pans. When again light, bake in an oven at 375 deg. F about an hour. Canned tomato juice may be used, or fresh tomatoes may be stewed and the liquid strained through double cheesecloth. The vitamin value of tomatoes is not destroyed by cooking.

RHUBARB AND ORANGE CONSERVE

1 box frosted rhubarb (3 cups when cut in ½ inch pieces
1 2-3 cups granulated sugar
¼ tsp. cinnamon
8 whole cloves
1 medium-sized orange
⅛ tsp. mace

Cut rhubarb while frosted in ½ inch pieces. Place all ingredients together in greased casserole—add grated rind of orange as well as juice and pulp. Cover and bake until rhubarb is tender. If very juicy uncover during last half hour of baking. Takes 1½ hours to bake.

PINEAPPLE AND APRICOT JAM

Mix one No. 2 can Hawaiian crushed pineapple, 2½ cups stewed apricots (fruit cut in pieces) and 7 cups sugar and bring to boiling. Boil rapidly for one minute, remove from fire and add 2-3 cup commercial pectin. Stir for a minute, pour into sterile glasses.

Marry-Go-Round

'My Wife Has Gone to the Country!'

By HELEN ROWLAND

THIS IS THE TIME of year when a man prepares to put the "wife and kiddies" on the train for the country, with very mixed feelings and a lot of misgiving.

* * *

Just at first he knows that he is going to be awfully blue and lonesome and neglected, and he feels rather sorry for himself. All alone in a city apartment from Monday to Friday!

HE FEELS RATHER SORRY FOR HIMSELF
"ALL ALONE"

* * *

But, after a few days of restaurant breakfasts and untrammeled freedom, when he finds that he hasn't perished of starvation or anything, he sits up, begins to take notice, stretches out from his long matrimonial cramp, and discovers what a fettered soul he has been!

* * *

Life, after all, has its compensations! Oh, joy! He doesn't have to get up in the morning until he FEELS like it!

* * *

He can turn over on his good ear and take another beauty nap, and nobody will wail that the toast is getting cold or that he'll be late at the office.

* * *

He can wear his loudest, "snappiest" cravats, and his passionate purple socks and indulge his suppressed desires for beauty by sticking a flower in his buttonhole—and nobody will regard him suspiciously.

* * *

He can linger over his desk until midnight or make a dozen detours on the way home without glancing at his watch or feeling that the dinner is getting cold and the "Little Woman" is getting hot while they wait. And he can waver home at 2 a. m., let himself in boldly and noisily and clump up the stairs without running into a human questionnaire!

HE CAN WEAR HIS LOUDEST CRAVATS

* * *

Oh, yes, from Monday to Friday, he is an UNFETTERED SOUL! And yet everybody feels SORRY for him!

Hints From the Ever-Handy Beauty Box

WHEN the cuticle around the finger nails clings persistently to the nail base, get some powdered pumice stone and a small bottle of peroxide. Dip the orangewood stick into the peroxide, then into the pumice, forming a scouring agent that will gently lift the cuticle away from its moorings without causing shreds or abrasions. Don't overlook the good results of a nail cream applied at night. Cold cream will do or olive oil or lanoline.

VERBENA perfume is sweet and refreshing. A simple one can be compounded by mixing together 30 drops of oil of orange, 10 fluid ounces of spirit of lemon, 8 fluid ounces of spirit of lemon grass. Not a drop of verbena in it, but that means nothing. The effect is that of the fragrance of the little garden bloom.

SWIM! Nothing like it to develop chest and bust—and the normal figure requires chestiness. Swimming brings the feminine shape to normal, taking off excess hippage and spread, putting on curves where curves should be. It is the perfect, ideal exercise and beauty help.

Proper Diet for Acne

Cleanliness Also a Requisite

By Dr. R. S. COPELAND

MANY inquiries have come to me from young readers suffering from acne, and to answer them it is necessary to go somewhat into detail.

Dr. Copeland

Acne is the most prevalent of all body diseases, and though it causes no pain, it causes mental suffering and embarrassment to those afflicted.

Acne is an inflammatory disease of the glands of the skin. It is most frequently found on the face, but may involve the shoulders and the back. The skin is greasy and contains many blackheads and pimples. These pimples frequently become infected, discharge and leave behind an ugly crust and possibly a permanent scar.

Another factor which must not be overlooked is carelessness about foods. Overeating of rich foods, candies, pastries and desserts is a common weakness at this age.

In the treatment of acne the hygienic care of the skin is important. Absolute cleanliness is the first requisite. It is necessary to get rid of blackheads and cleanse and disinfect the skin as thoroughly as possible and this must be attended to before relief can be obtained.

Bathe the face in hot water until the skin becomes red, then with great gentleness pinch out the blackheads, or remove them with an extractor. After this the face should be bathed again with a pint of hot water to which one teaspoonful of compound solution of cresol has been added.

STOCK MARKET BUSINESS IS STILL BIG

By FRANK H. MELOON

Popular idea that everything is extremely dull in Wall Street is true only by comparison with previous hectic sessions. Business is still really big, since it can fairly be said to be running around a million shares a day on the average, excluding the Saturday two hour sessions. It continues to look however, as if it would be a long time before the volume is sufficiently large to demand the total potential production of the new high speed tickers, so blithely installed on Sept. 2, 1930. These tickers can carry 500 characters a minute against 300 previously.

Col. L. P. Ayres

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, well known statistician of the Cleveland Trust Co., provides a bright spot in the news when he states his belief that we are headed for higher per capita outputs and living standards. He bases his conclusion that a period of even greater prosperity than we have seen must follow the current era on a graph of statistical records of American economic history running through 77 years. He believes that prosperity varies with production.

STATE ST.
Hears:

That the attitude of hope suggested here last week should not be abandoned. Some disturbing financial happenings took the edge off the budget news. But apparently the troublesome situations are well in hand. There is a fair chance that a better market will develop later in the week.

The Budget

Although the market has been battered from pillar to post because of developments in Washington, leading financial authorities refused to believe the budget would remain unbalanced. The refusal to adopt an intelligent sales tax was an awful blow. But poor taxes or otherwise the budget had to be balanced and it is better that it be done through stupid levies than not at all. Now business knows the cost of government and can plan ahead.

Reliable Washington observers expect the jumbled tax bill will now go to a conference between the House and the Senate, in order to iron out the differences in the [illegible] bills of those legislative groups. Out of this it is expected the final tax bill will make an appearance in time for enactment before the 13th of June. This is the program and things had reached such a low state it is better than none at all.

Boardroom Briefs

Some care in choosing stocks is necessary in order that industries placed under new burdens are avoided . . . It is more than possible such situations will reflect additional liquidation once the market becomes a more settled affair . . . As far as this space is able to learn, astute traders expect a period of stabilization after the first snapback . . . It is then accumulation will be in order.

As far as the immediate effect of a balanced budget is concerned, it appears that the bond pool will get to work . . . The Reserve is also expected to push its plans more vigorously . . . The present run on American gold reserves should diminish gradually . . . And, most important of all, American business should start to lay its plans for a good expansion in the fall . . . The latter is prosperity. H. E. B.

POLITICS HERE AND IN EUROPE DISTURBING

By B. C. Forbes

POLITICS CONTINUE to plague business and employment.

America and Europe would almost seem to be waging a competition. In both the politicians create the impression that they are doing their worst to stir up uncertainty and fear.

The ousting of Chancellor Bruening is interpreted in financial circles here as containing deeper meaning than has been publicly revealed. The move is viewed as not unrelated to Lausanne. The apparent rise of Hitler doubtless is counted upon by Germany to cause France to hesitate to go to extremes in pressing reparation payments.

At home, political wrangling, political criss-crossing, political bitterness, political delay, aggravate economic unsettlement. Could the total cost of each additional day's desultory squabbling by Congress be computed, even the most irresponsible politician could not fail to be awed. Every class in the land has to contribute to paying the penalty—the working classes, merchants, manufacturers, railroads, utilities, oil and mining companies, the professional classes, taxpayers, everybody.

Never was there more profound truth invested in the adage "Delays are dangerous."

Influential financial interests privately confess frankly they see no use attempting to co-operate to turn the adverse tide until Congress finishes its job and goes home.

It is something, however, to know that the financial powers-that-be plan affirmative action as soon as the congressional storm passes.

Danger in Closing Stock Exchange

The question of closing the New York stock exchange has been seriously considered in responsible circles. So has the fixing of minimum prices for securities.

The decision to date has been against either course.

"Closing the stock exchange or fixing minimum prices would be tantamount to declaring a moratorium," one inner-circle financier observed to me. "The effect abroad would be very bad, terrible. It would blast confidence in this country and its securities. If liquidations could not be carried on here, markets unquestionably would be set up elsewhere—in London and Montreal, for example. Foreign holders of American investments would lose faith in them and would dump them regardless of prices."

Almost every banker readily admits that securities are selling ridiculously below their real worth. But when borrowers ask to have their collateral appraised on that principle, objections are raised.

Bankers explain that they are the custodians of other people's money, that their first duty is to the owners of the money, that it would be both unjust and unsafe to lend more than the current market value of the pledged securities, and that, therefore, loans must either be kept sound, or sold out.

Thus it comes about that banks as a whole are aggravating the debacle by pressing bonds and stocks on the market day after day. Thus it comes about, too, that more and more of their remaining loans are weakened, and these in turn have to be liquidated.

It isn't easy for the layman to understand why, seeing that bankers are convinced many securities are selling at absurd prices, they have not shown greater readiness to invest surplus funds in security bargains. The federal reserve has pumped enough funds into the banks to make possible the use of several billions of additional capital. But lamentably little of these reserves have gone beyond the banks' own vaults.

Poor Showing in Dividends

The dividend records which this column has compiled many years reveal that during May there were only 20 favorable announcements as contrasted with 174 unfavorable declarations. The immediate outlook dividendwise is not inspiring.

The second half of the year will either be a lot better or a lot worse than the first half. At least in a limited sense, Congress may be said to hold the key.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE MIXED

Today's brisk advance on the Boston Stock Exchange was short-lived and the trend was mixed late in the session. Gains of from 1 to 5 points were quickly erased and several issues sank to fresh 1932 minimums. Atchison was a major fraction higher after selling up over 5.

American Telephone was down 1⅛ to a new low for the year after showing a gain of over 2 points earlier in the day. Boston Elevated dropped 4 points to sell at a new low level. Edison Electric was a point higher but reacted late in the session to show a point loss at a new low.

Boston & Albany dropped over 2 points to a fresh bottom while Maine Central receded 2 points. New Haven maintained most of its earlier gain, while Pennsylvania slipped down a minor fraction. Boston & Maine A stamped was at a new low on a point recession.

Torrington, Pacific Mills and Swift International were strong with gains of from 1 to 2 points being shown for these issues. Gillette selling ex-dividend was slightly higher. New lows for the year were set by Pond Creek Pocahontas, Bigelow Sanford and Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred.

SPECTATOR
Says:

Bears rushed to cover at the start of today's session in Wall Street and leaders were pushed up a while $1 to $5 a share. Bear side has been growing more and more unfavorable and well-posted people have been looking the list over for buys.

Last Straw

Defeat of the sales tax was bad enough, but the spectacle of President Hoover's appeal for this legislation being turned down within a few minutes after he had completed his plea was the last straw, financially speaking.

Buying was induced by rumors of an overnight change in the situation. Hope will not down. There is no such thing as catching the bottom, for that is beyond prediction, but possible losses now are relatively small and everything but the news is in their favor.

American Tobacco B

American Tobacco B is curious since danger of a reduction in the $5 dividend seems remote right now.

And it was not so long ago that Atchison was earning annually very nearly what it is selling for now.

A rally to be real at this time should lift the market about 40 per cent, at least, in view of the terrific depreciation in the last two months.

There were quite a few cash transactions recently, indicating that some shorts were being bought in.

Exchange Suspends Wise, Hobbs & Arnold

Wise, Hobbs & Arnold, Congress st., have been suspended from the Boston Stock Exchange for inability to meet their present obligations. The failure is a relatively small affair.

The house has been in existence for more than 15 years, has enjoyed a reputation as conservative and was particularly well known for its conduct of week stock auctions.

Partners are Arthur C. Wise, Walter L. Hobbs, Robert C. Seaver, Harry W. Crockett and Asa F. Clark.

The firm has been active in distribution of stock of Westfield Manufacturing Co., which company recently suspended common dividends.

Closing Is Firm in London Market

London, June 1 (INS)—Action of the United States Senate in passing a tax bill designed to balance the American budget caused transatlantic securities to advance strongly on the London exchange today and stocks generally gained in an active market.

Oil, mines and industrial issues and British funds were all firm at the close.

STOCK PRICES BACK AND FILL IN WALL ST.

New York, June 1—The most spectacular rally of the year to date on the New York Stock Exchange today invited fresh selling which finally drove a number of leading shares back into new low ground. Prices back and filled.

UTILITIES ARE SOLD.

Stocks steadied in the late trading today after an early rise of 1 to 5 points had been more than lost by most leaders, net gains of 1 to 2 points were made by Aatchison, American Can, Drug, Liggett & Myers "B", Air Reduction, Case, Allied Chemical and Sears Roebuck.

American Telephone was weak, turning an early rise of 3 into a loss of about 2. U. S. Steel firmed after a fractional dip into new low ground. Transactions approximated 1,800,000 shares.

While the militant drive in Congress to balance the budget was hailed in leading banking circles as highly constructive, various financial quarters were obviously disappointed over the measures adopted by the Senate to raise the necessary revenues.

Selling from impaired collateral loan accounts at banks and from other sources quickly depressed the market, after a flurry of short covering at the start had swept prices up 1 to 5 points.

The utilities were sold in considerable volume for a time around midday, but the list steadied

SENATE LEVY LARGE

Brokerage quarters felt that selling of the utilities had been accelerated by the 3 per cent levy on gross revenues included in the Senate tax bill, although the group had been under heavy pressure for some days before that tax was adopted. American Water Works cut its annual dividend rate to $2 from $3, the immediate cause of new selling.

The character of the renewed selling was described in important brokerage quarters as similar to that of recent sessions, when liquidation of impaired collateral loan accounts by banks, and selling by estates and such investing concerns as fire insurance companies and investment trusts, were regarded as probably the most important factors.

A substantial part of the day's selling was said to have come from the interior.

The extent of the decline has led to much discussion in banking quarters of establishing arbitrary minimum prices on leading bonds and stocks for loaning purposes, on the theory that the market no longer represented true values. It was felt that this might check the vicious circle of selling out of impaired loans.

One of the leading bankers, however, said in response to a query that he opposed the suggestion on the same grounds that he had opposed artificial price fixing of commodities. He felt that it would be harmful in the long run.

Completion of a tax bill by the Senate had a distinctly good effect in foreign markets, where prices generally were higher.

BENNETT'S JOURNAL REVEALS SECRET OF NOVELIST

By GILBERT SELDES

SHORTLY AFTER ARNOLD BENNETT DIED, Rebecca West, who can be as just and generous as she can be severe, and hates only stupidity and cruelty, wrote a beautiful essay on him, which was printed later as one of the John Day pamphlets. It is interesting to read Bennett's Journal, dealing with the years before Miss West knew him and to find how precise her estimate is. "Arnold Bennett," she says, "wanted to do everything and to be everything. That determined his personal life and his literary career . . . And again: "He had the first necessity for a novelist in his insatiable appetite for life. He loved every phenomenon which the world presented to him and grudged no expense of time and energy in studying it. Also he had the right emotional dynamo; what he saw he loved."

GILBERT SELDES

A Million Good Words

The Journal, now published by the Viking Press, runs from 1896 to 1910, from the time Bennett began to be a writer to after the publication of his greatest novel, "The Old Wives' Tale." Two further volumes will be issued; the second will take him to America and through the war, in which he was one of the heads of propaganda for a time; and the third to the time of his death. That a man who wrote prodigiously for publication should have expended the pure overflow of his passion for writing in a Journal of over a million words is itself remarkable. That the Journal is always clear, bright and interesting makes it one of his primary literary works itself.

As a writer contracted to "do" about 300,000 words a year, I am naturally fascinated by everything Bennett says of his methods, his difficulties, his prowess, his successes and his failures. But these constitute a special interest and only a small part of the book. The rest is full of things and people, and full of Arnold Bennett himself, a man who must have been endlessly absorbing to his friends.

Everything Goes

He wrote "...the smell of the earth, the taste of fruit and of kisses—these things are unaffected by the machinations of trusts and the hysteria of stock exchanges," and the Westminster Gazette left out the words "and of kisses." Bennett notes the omission with a smile. He travels in Switzerland and is as severe on his countrymen as Americans are on theirs: "They would have liked a whole population to await there (a rural station) ready to start into life and serve them when they happened to pass." He speaks of "the perversity and corruption of the faces" of the Parisians; he records anecdotes of old farmers. He discusses the chastity of Oxford dons—and I wonder if this is one of the passages omitted from the English edition. He talks to survivors of the siege of Paris, in preparation for the fine characters in "The Old Wives' Tale," and the emptiness of their reports lets us in to the miracle of what he finally made of them.

Genesis of a Masterpiece

The germ of this book came to him five years before he wrote it. He was in a restaurant and opposite his favorite seat was a crotchety, fussy, old woman, who complained of everything, changed her place and became the butt of everyone in the room, including the waitresses. "She was repulsive; no one could like her or sympathize with her. But I thought—she has been young and slim once. And I immediately thought of a long 10 or 15,000 words short story, 'The History of Two Old Women.' I gave this woman a sister, fat as hersel....One should have lived ordinarily, married prosaically and become a widow...Both have been overtaken by fat. And they live together again in old age, not too rich, a nuisance to themselves and to others. Neither has any imagination..."

A Lesson for Others

"And I immediately thought"...he wrote that same night. His mind worked that way, quickly, seeing a long way ahead. The essence of the novel is in that longish short story he planned. It is a great novel because of the swift illumination which came to him: "she has been young and slim once." It is superb. Our novelists who worry themselves into nervous breakdowns trying to think out new tricks, new combinations of stale speakeasy and penthouse situations, can learn the whole secret of creativeness in these few sentences.

I meant not to go on about Bennett as novelist, but everything he did turned in the end to his writing, in these years, so it is inevitable. But Bennett's mind was so fascinated by millions of things—from a child's funeral to the way a woman talked on the telephone—that his book has an endless interest. It recommends itself by the author's name, but there is no harm in adding a further recommendation.

JEWELERS SET NEW RECORD

Boston hung up another business record today which few other cities in the United States could duplicate when the famous old firm of Bigelow, Kennard & Co. jewelers and silversmiths, announced their first sale in more than 101 years.

As one of those century-old Boston concerns which have become something more than mere business enterprises in the public mind through generations of intimate relationship with thousands of New England families, Bigelow, Kennard & Co. has been looked upon as an institution representing the economic, historical and cultural traditions which New Englanders proudly cherish and the rest of the world reveres.

Ernest A. Bigelow, president of the company, said today:

"Because of the abundance of rumors, some malicious and all of them false, the Bigelow family takes occasion to inform the public that since 1830, when their ancestor, John Bigelow, founded the house now known as Bigelow, Kennard & Co., Incorporated, the family has been, now is, and intends to remain, in control of the business, having confidence in the future of New England and of Bigelow, Kennard & Co., Incorporated."

What the Hearst Papers Advocate No. 7 Federal sales tax and excise taxes to replace the income tax, which has degenerated into a racket.

Sales Tax Is Needed

Congress Should Act Promptly

Congress has aggravated the spiral of deflationary forces by needless delay in enacting a sound financial program.

Reports from Washington indicate that the underlying economic realities of the situation, which cannot be brushed aside for reasons of political expediency, has strengthened the opportunity for favorable reconsideration of a manufacturers' sales tax in the Senate.

As an alternative to the general sales tax, the special excise taxes, considered by the upper House, constitute an INTOLERABLE NUISANCE, which will place unfavored industries at a special disadvantage in the new competition for the consumer's dollar.

The silly fallacy behind the "soak the rich" move to raise the necessary revenues through heightening tax rates on personal and corporate incomes is revealed in current statistics concerning business profits in 1932.

According to a compilation by the Standard Statistics Company, the net profits of 387 companies, which have thus far reported for the first quarter of 1932, showed a decrease of 73.8 per cent, as compared with the already greatly depressed first quarter of 1931. Of these, 295 industrials revealed a decline of 85.4 per cent; 33 utilities of 14.9 per cent; and 59 railroads raised their red ink deficit from $2,000,000 to $47,431,000.

In the light of these figures, HOW DOES CONGRESS PURPOSE TO BALANCE THE BUDGET BY INCREASING HYPOTHETICAL RATES ON HYPOTHETICAL INCOMES?

Unless Congress broadens the tax base and places a levy on the productivity of the 35,000,000 self-supporting Americans who are still gainfully employed, it is SHEER HYPOCRISY to pretend that the budget is being balanced.

But that is far from the whole of the story.

With business profits approaching the vanishing point, the national need is not to soak the employing classes, but rather to ENCOURAGE them so that they will go forward and create new opportunities for employment for the 8,000,000 or more who are without jobs.

The dole of tax exemption is a meaningless gift to the unemployed, who pay no taxes anyway.

The economic crisis emphasizes the hazard of relying on the unstable factor of profits for taxation, instead of on the more durable foundation of business transactions.

As far as taxes are concerned, Congress should be guided by two criteria. The first should be to make certain that the Government will get the necessary revenues, and the second is to tax in a manner which will prove least disturbing to job-giving industry, commerce and agriculture.

And in recognizing the inevitability of solid facts, Congress should do so PROMPTLY, and relieve business of the gnawing fears resulting from uncertainty.

Cemetery Pedlars

Now that another Memorial Day has gone into history, we might take some profit from the experience of it.

We wonder that the dead in their graves didn't kick the footboard out of their coffins and rise in their protest against the rank commercialism practiced in the name of veneration and respect for them.

Some of the cemeteries resembled trade marts and auction rooms more than the calm and serenity of the last resting place of our families and friends.

There were hawkers and pedlars selling everything from wax flowers to hot dogs and hot buttered popcorn. Every chiseler and panhandler had moved out from Tremont Street. There were tribes of mendicants and professional beggars like on a public square in Paris or Brussels.

The only things lacking to defile the day were the steam calliope and the tattooed lady in the sideshow.

Our good people don't want this travesty upon the name of a glorious event which is supposed to arouse the finest emotions within us.

Christ lashed the money changers out of the temple. If our cemetery managers haven't the power or the disposition to lash these modern harpies out of the shrine of our honored and departed friends where we desire to offer solemn tribute to their memory in quiet and dignity, the police should step in and perform the duty.

Better to have no Memorial Day at all than to have one which pollutes the sacred atmosphere with the greed of street-corner bartering.

Those Traffic Jams

It would be interesting to know whether any of the State officials of New England who spend the millions for highway construction were caught in the recent holiday traffic jams.

Take the Newburyport Turnpike for example.

From Portsmouth, N. H., to Newburyport, Mass., a distance of more than twenty miles, there were several thousand autos held for hours in a single file.

These people were anxious to get to their homes, and they had every right to assume that adequate transportation facilities would have been supplied them out of the several hundred millions of dollars they have contributed for this service.

We seem to have had enough of wasteful construction of cross-patch roadways in small, unimportant communities where the local politician has a drag with the spending authorities.

Trap-Nested Magpies

A new development in the poultry industry has been uncovered by the commissioners of Walla Walla County, Washington. Because magpies raid the nests of pheasants and other game birds, a bounty of 4 cents each was offered for their eggs. The result is a strain of trap-nested, guaranteed 300-egg-a-year magpies, developed, it is claimed, by unemployed in the foothills of the Blue Mountains. The plan was simple. When they found a clutch of magpie eggs they would leave one in the nest, which caused Mrs. Magpie to start all over again earning bounty.

A man who can induce a magpie to stop chattering long enough to lay a 4-cent egg ought to be useful somewhere in this troubled world. Perhaps he could tell us how to get the American eagle to stop moaning long enough to lay a few 100-cent dollars.

New York Day by Day

Drab Wall Street

NEW YORK, June 1—Wall Street, once the liveliest spot in daylight hours, has become depressingly drab. Activity that geysered into the furious fume of its manhole jets has vanished. Tickers tick hopefully but board rooms are deserted. The last of the loyalists have deserted.

Restaurants, catering to noonday trade, are ghostly with empty white table tops. Thousands who, since the crash, went to the financial district merely as a jesture until things righted, have finally abandoned daily trips. Those who have not jumped from windows are in seclusion.

For months Wall Street expected the turn upward that did not come. Today hope has so waned that many in a position to know say it will be four years before Wall Street comes back. Some 20,000 men and women, who thought themselves secure, are without jobs in the area.

Many brokerage houses have weathered the cyclone but are manned by scant handfuls. Where there were a dozen or more telephone operators, there is but one. Those long distance connections with San Francisco, Boston and Chicago by the mere lift of a receiver are discontinued.

An important broker tells me on a day recently his sales for the day were little more than $50. On a similar day three years ago sales totaled $423,000. As goes Wall Street, so goes its army of small tradesmen whose livelihood depends on the street's prosperity.

So true is this that the vacancies among small shops is nearly 50 per cent. The most pessimistic in Wall Street believe the worst is over, but dread the future. "Burnt children fear the fire!" Wall Street's next prosperity depends on new and trusting crops of investors. Lambs to be shorn!

So many tortuous twists of streets down town would have delighted Dickens—charming cul de sacs entirely lost in the Manhattan shuffle, footpaths back to the long ago. They have the almost forgotten flavor of less time-clocked days when there was leisure in the world, when one paid a visit to a poem or could stay a weekend in a tale. On Beaver st. I saw a wooden Indian cigar sign and on Bridge, a rusted foot scraper, and on another sequestered by-path an old-fashioned cellar door with a ring-lift of iron. Dead worlds sifting through new!

Park Row has until lately had an especial tug for newspaper men. But it is mottled now like the Bowery's leprous landscape. All the print shops have scattered. Ham and Dolan's is a memory. Buildings are shabby. Only good old Doc Perry's remains, still bright with customary drugstore glitter but for many somehow stained with the ineradicable bitterness of neglect.

* * *

When Park Row was my top-o'-the-world. Frank O'Malley and Ed Hill were the best known reporters in town, writing unsigned pieces for the morning Sun. The terrible World twins—Joe Jeff O'Neill and Don Clarke—were giving Herbert Bayard Swope a daily headache. Irvin Cobb was authoring a daily humorous column for the Evening World. Goldberg's "Ike and Mike" convulsed the town. Bennett was inviting managing editors by cable to Paris to enjoy the sadistic pleasure of firing them. It was a peremptory generation of square-shooting newspapermen, sometimes hard drinking and brusque among themselves but always decent, a gallant contribution to the Fourth Estate.

Reuben, de luxe delicatessner, is said to get along with less sleep than anyone in the night life hoopedee-do. His busiest hours are from 1 to 6 a. m. He generally retires around ten a. m., sleeps two hours and sleeps another two hours between the dinner hour and midnight and has been following this program for years. Like Napoleon, he can sneak off for a five-minute nap at will.

On a block in East 62d st. this afternoon a platinum blonde with a come-hither look led a young fox on a beaded leash. I circled skittishly. I have a sharp memory of boyhood days on a Missouri farm when I approached a fox dangling in a trap, which wasn't pss-t! a fox any more than anything.

Listen, World!

How Wise Are Mothers?

HOW WISE ARE MOTHERS?

Does a missis automatically acquire wisdom with the birth of a child! And is an ounce of "mother instinct" worth a ton of spinster education?

Elsie Robinson

Representative Beck of Pennsylvania thinks she does, and it is. Recently he made a speech before Congress in which he assailed governments bureaus in general, and the Maternity Bureau in particular. Why, he asked, should the wonderful American mother need a federal bureau to tell her how to raise little Jimmy?

"MY OWN BELIEF," said he "IS THAT THE UNMARRIED LADIES WHO RUN THE MATERNITY BUREAU CAN'T TELL THE AMERICAN MOTHER ANYTHING."

He's probably right in part of that statement. Jehovah, himself, couldn't tell some mothers anything, so assured are they of their own perfection. But that does not imply that they don't need telling.

I am a moher. I have worked, professionally, with mothers in clinics and juvenile courts for 15 years.

Every day I am more convinced that motherhood is the most important, most noble job on earth; but I am also convinced that mothers, as a class, are the most ignorant, inefficient and often criminally careless, of all workers on earth.

But don't mothers love their children and sacrifice for them? They do indeed, tenderly and heroically—to the death! But what has that to do with the question?

LOVE IS A BEAUTIFUL THING, BUT IT IS NOT AND CANNOT BE A SUBSTITUTE FOR TRAINED BRAINS. And mothers need training as much as any other class of workers.

Mother instinct! Piffle! Why should a couple of hours in an obstetrical ward equip a female with a course in dietetics, a knowledge of child psychology and physiology, and a working familiarity with the world of her day? And how can she rear her child properly unless she has such information?

The answer is that it doesn't, and she can't.

SENTIMENTAL THEORY AND MAMMY SONGS TO THE CONTRARY, CHILDBIRTH DOES NO MORE FOR A WOMAN'S BRAINS THAN CALF-BIRTH DOES FOR A COW'S.

Cow instinct is sufficient in a cow world. The cow mother, loving, licking and in due time weaning her calf, amply fulfills all her maternal requirements—bovine life being uncomplicated by social obligations.

What is responsible for the juvenile crime wave? Is it the autobile? The bright lights? The speakeasy? No. These things contribute to juvenile delinquency, but they do not cause it.

THE BLUNDERS OF SILLY, SELFISH, IGNORANT, ARROGANT MOTHERS CAUSE IT.

And who is responsible for such qualities in mothers? You and I are responsible. Instead of treating mothers like human beings, and judging their service by the tests which we apply to any other human performance, we have sentimentalized over motherhood. We have placed mothers in shrines. We have, regardless of their qualifications, granted them honors and privileges, and exempted them from all reasonable supervision and criticism.

AS A RESULT, ANY STUPID LITTLE SAP WHO GIVES BIRTH TO A CHILD AUTOMATICALLY ACQUIRES THE STATUS OF A SAINT—AND GETS BY WITH MURDER.

THIS COUNTRY WILL NEVER BE EITHER SAFE OR CIVILIZED UNTIL IT STOPS REVERING MOTHERHOOD, PER SE, AND INSISTS ON ADEQUATE PERFORMANCE.

And, regardless of Rep. Beck's opinion, one educated, childless spinster, who has been trained in child physiology and psychology, knows more about the proper raising of kids than a million moron mamas.

Just Folks

An Apple Tree

The elm is stately and dignified,
And the maple tree is fair.
The poplar stands at the countryside
Like a sentinel stationed there.
The oak is patient and calm and strong
Like men we can all recall,
But it seems to me that the apple tree
Is the friendliest tree of all.

The chestnut tree of our boyhood days
Was one that we romped about,
But the cold, hard pavement a city lays
They tell me has crowded it out.
The cedar is fussy and asks for care,
And the pine grows straight and tall,
But an apple tree, wherever it be,
Seems the friendliest tree of all.

The weeping willow droops over the land
Where a brooklet seaward runs,
And in groups the silver birches stand
As stately and quiet as nuns.
But from blossoming time in early May
To the harvest of the fall
It seems to me that an apple tree
Is the friendliest tree of all.

Jacking Up Income Tax Retards Prosperity

By Bainbridge Colby

NO ONE will question, as Mr. Hearst says, that "Congress is confused and alarmed—in fact rattled, and the Senate is just as much rattled as the House."

He likens it to "an audience in a theater which is in a panic." Admitting that "misguided efforts which burden business naturally increase unemployment and aggravate the depression," Mr. Hearst calls upon us to aid Congress with constructive suggestions and a definite program.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY.

There is probably no "misguided effort" to which Congress has lent itself with such zest and unanimity as jacking up the income tax levies; and there is nothing it has done which has had a more repressive effect upon business revival.

A constructive suggestion would be that Congress pay some heed to the principles of economics and also the recent experiences of the United States from which it could learn the folly and the futility of carrying the income tax beyond a certain point.

• • •

THERE is a little book entitled "Taxation: The People's Business," which could be read and digested in a single evening, which is packed with useful information on this subject. It was written by Mr. Mellon, with the assistance of Mr. S. Parker Gilbert and Mr. Garrard B. Winston, both Treasury officials, whose aid is generously acknowledged.

Mr. Mellon has suffered in prestige as the result of the deflation, and the disposition to ascribe it—I think in undue measure—to the policies of his administration.

And yet, what his book contains as to the destructive effect upon business activity of excessive rates of income and profits taxes, deserves to be studied by anyone with a vote to cast on a tax measure.

President Wilson is quoted as saying, in one of his messages to Congress:

> "There is a point at which in peace times high rates of income and profits taxes discourage energy, remove the incentive to new enterprise, encourage extravagant expenditure and produce industrial stagnation, with consequent unemployment and other attendant evils.

• • •

STATISTICS which illustrate this truth are not lacking. Secretary of the Treasury Houston, in his annual report of 1920, speaks of the point at which a progressive income tax becomes uncollectible.

> "For the year 1916," said he, "a net income amounting to $992,972,985 was included in the returns of the taxpayers having a net income over $300,000 a year. This aggregate fell to $731,372,153 for the year 1917 and to $392,247,329 for the year 1918. There is little reason to believe that the actual incomes of the richer taxpayers of the country had fallen in that interval."

This decline continued steadily until incomes in the $300,000 class amounted in 1921 to only $153,000,000. In the same period of six years, the number of taxpayers in that class fell from 1296 to 246, although the total of net incomes, returned for taxation, increased within the period from a little more than six billions to nineteen and one-half billions.

A speech of President Coolidge is quoted, in which he says:

> "Experience does not show that the higher rates produce a larger revenue. Experience is all the other way. . . . But if the rates on large incomes are so high that they disappear, the small taxpayer will be left to bear the entire burden. If on the other hand the rates are placed where they will produce the most revenue from large incomes, then the small taxpayer will be relieved."

• • •

MR. COOLIDGE reminds us that it has been the experience of the Treasury and it is the opinion of the best experts that the rate which will collect most from the people of wealth, thus giving the largest relief to the people of moderate wealth, is not over twenty-five per cent.

The advocate of a "soak the rich" treatment of income assessment ignores the fact that high taxes always lead to a high price level. It is not alone the persons who are directly assessed who ultimately pay the taxes. They are passed on in large measure to consumers and many a man who is not directly assessed is nevertheless a substantial contributor to the payment of the high taxes which he seeks to impose upon the other fellow.

A Staggering Veteran and a Worried Minister

Rev. Mr. Bailey of Hyde Park allowed himself to get all fussed up because he saw a supposed war veteran staggering in uniform.

So much so, that he used the staggering vet as the theme of his discourse at a memorial service, demanded to know from the surprised and embarrassed war veterans on the platform if they approved of such actions and insisted there must be a larger measure of respect for all laws, notably the prohibition law.

Cheer up, Mr. Bailey. One swallow doesn't make a Summer. Nor does one veteran, whether he was staggering from intoxicants or the ardor and excitement of the day, make up the grand body of 4,000,000 young men who comprised the American Army in the World War.

Even soldiers are human beings and make their mistakes. Some of them, it might be said, made the "mistake" of crawling into No Man's Land to rescue their wounded brothers, only to be shot down themselves by enemy machine guns.

Others made the mistake of thinking that the stay-at-home patriots would be as generous when the war was over as they were with lip service when the young men departed for the terrors of war with the plaudits of the multitude in their ears.

All of them probably made the mistake of being away at all and allowing the evil, sumptuary prohibition law to be saddled upon them and their country during their absence.

To accuse all these fine war veterans because of the possible indiscretion of one of their number would be the equivalent of charging the entire clergy of respectable gentlemen for responsibility for the crime of Richeson, who murdered his clandestine sweetheart. The people are too sensible to permit such a sweeping indictment to be drawn in either case.
